5 ———— Mahomedan law—Estate limited to take effect in favour of a person after another s death—It is not consistent with Mahomedan law to limit an estate to take effect after the determination on the death of the owner of a prior estate by way of what is known to English law as a vested remainder so as to create an interest which can pass to a third person before the determination of the prior estate The parties to a solenamah or compromise were on the one side the widow of a Mahomedan she being in possession of villages in Oudh which had belonged to him and of which the summary settlement of 1858 had been made with her and on the other side two brothers alleged to be his sons. By the compromise which was made in the course of proceedings at regular settlement it was agreed that the widow should during her life time continue to hold possession and remain proprietor without power of alienation and that after her death the two sons should possess each one-half of the property Held that on the true construction of the compromise the title of the sons to succeed was contingent upon their surviving the widow and that no interest passed to their heirs on their deaths in her lifetime ABDUL WAHID KHAN v NURAN BIBI I. 6 ———— Penalty for non fulfilment of conditions Suit to enforce—A suit for a kabuliat having been brought in the Revenue Court a deed of compromise was filed in the suit in which it was stipulated that a certain sum would be paid by the defendants to the zamindar as rent of four kanis of land including homestead after mutation of names that R15 8 on account of outstanding balance and charges connected with the rents would be paid to the plaintiffs within a month and that in default the defendants would have no right to the lands specified. The defendants having failed to fulfil the conditions the plaintiffs executed their decree and realised from them the balance above mentioned and having sued them for the rent obtained a decree The plaintiffs then brought this suit to recover possession in virtue of itmami right of the land on the ground of non fulfilment of the conditions of the compromise The first Court gave them a decree which the lower Appellate Court reversed, holding that the deed merely imposed a penalty with a view to punctual payment. Held that as what the defendants had to do was of a perpetually recurring nature and no action which the Court might take would be effectual in preserving the plaintiff from being sued by the zamindar the intention was that the terms should be strictly enforced on failure to perform the conditions and that the defendant should be obliged to surrender the lands MAHOMED HASHIM v HOSSEIN ALI 19 W R. 433

7 ———— Construction and enforceability of compromise of suit between members of grantee s family—Removal of manager—Appointment of receiver—Early in the eighteenth century two villages were granted by the zamindars of Sivaganga and Guntamanaikanur to the last of the Naik rulers of Madura for the maintenance of the rank and dignity of his family which was now represented by the plaintiffs and defendants Nos. 1 to 23 The property was long managed by the representative for the time being of the senior line In 1844 one of the junior members instituted a suit for partition which terminated in a decree declaring the corpus of the property to be indivisible and the annual produce to be divisible in certain shares. Subsequently in 18 7 a compromise was entered into by which the parties agreed to vary the distribution of the shares but they agreed that the management of the estate indivisible and inalienable should continue to be vested in the eldest line subject to certain supervision on the part of the other members The compromise was long acted upon by the family but in 1892 the representative of the senior line died leaving only his widow and infant sons. The widow as guardian of the elder son then entered on the management and being grossly delegated it to a stranger The plaintiffs representing a junior line now sued for the removal of these persons from management and the appointment of another manager alleging both that they had no right to the managership and that they had been guilty of mismanagement. All the members of the family were made parties to the suit. Held that the compromise was binding on the parties and that under the compromise the plaintiffs had no right to joint management; and that the widow of the last manager should be removed from the managership and that until one of her sons came of age the estate should be managed by a receiver appointed from among the members of the family TIRUMALAI NAIK v BANGARU TIRUMALAI SAURI NAIK I L R. 21 Mad. 310

8 ——— Assignment of villages part of an impartible estate—Maintenance of a member of a junior branch of a joint Hindu family—Agreement—Arbitration award decree and settlement there on—Revenue by whom payable—A talukhdar owning an impartible inheritance was the head of a joint Hindu family of which the defendant his first cousin was a member in a junior branch In 1864 they came to terms as to the latter's claims upon the ancestral estate A decree in that year founded upon the award of arbitrators between them declared the talukhdar's ownership and the assignment by him of eleven villages to the junior member free of liability in respect of the revenue These terms were entered in an administration paper or wajib ul arz of the talukh before the settlement of 1867 in the record whereof they were also entered. And they were referred to in a sanad granted to the talukhdar When the settlement of 1889 was in progress the profits of the eleven villages and the Government demand thereon had greatly increased and for this jumma the talukhdar was liable without any proportionate increase of profit from the eleven villages In 1881 the talukhdar sued for a declaration that the defendant's right in the villages consisted only of a certain amount of allowance for maintenance derivable from them He also claimed that the defendant should repay to him a sum which he had paid for local cesses The defence was that the defendant's right in the eleven villages had been conclusively settled in the above proceedings Held that by the true construction of the decree of 1864 which was the foundation of the title of either party the profits of the eleven villages belonged to the defendant and that the revenue was to be paid as between the two by the plaintiff with the enhancements without benefit to him from the increase in the yield of the land The principle of the judgments below was that the question to be decided was of the kind where the head of a family and a junior member dispute the amount of maintenance that should be paid But the property assigned in this case was not of the variable character which belonged to an ordinary allowance for maintenance and there was nothing to show that the Courts had authority to disturb settled arrangements on the ground of their

whether it would be for benefit of minor to set aside compromise —The plaintiff a minor was as daughter and one of the heirs of A, entitled to $\frac{1}{8}$ths of his estate The value of A s estate was uncertain and depended on whether or not A had been a partner in business with M and whether or not a sum of R30 000 had been paid by M to A in satisfaction of all claims which A had against M in respect of the estate of K a deceased brother of A and former partner in the same business M having on A s death possessed himself of all the estates of A the plaintiff brought a suit against M in which a decree was made ordering an account to be taken of the estate of A which had come into the hands of M Pending such account M died leaving a will by which he appointed the son of A and another his executors and the suit was revived against them In their application for probate they stated that the value of M s estate so far as they had been able to ascertain and were aware was R4 41 000 Shortly after probate was granted negotiations were entered into between the executors and the advisers of the plaintiff for a compromise and a petition was with the concurrence of the executors presented by the plaintiff to the Court asking for its sanction to the terms agreed upon by the parties which were that the plaintiff should receive R20 000 in full of all demands and R5 000 for her costs of suit This petition took as the value of M s estate the amount stated by the executors in their application for probate and stated that the value of A s estate in case the above mentioned payment by M was proved would be R30 000 and in case it was not proved then a moiety of the estate of M and that considering the difficulties the plaintiff had to meet in proving her case and with a view to put an end to further trouble litigation and expense the above terms had been agreed to on her behalf These terms of compromise were sanctioned by the Court on the 11th September 1876 Shortly afterwards further property was discovered belonging to the estate of M The plaintiff brought a suit against the executors to set aside the compromise allowing that the terms had been accepted by her on the faith of the representation made by the executors in their application for probate and charging them with wilful and fraudulent concealment There was evidence to show that some of the property subsequently discovered was such that the defendants as executors ought to have known, even if they did not of its existence at the time of the compromise Held that even though the executors had no such knowledge and there was no actual fraud yet there was such culpable ignorance and neglect of duty on their part as to amount to fraud and carry with it the consequences of knowledge; and as the compromise had in consequence been entered into by the parties and sanctioned by the Court under a misapprehension of material facts the plaintiff was entitled to have the compromise set aside and the parties restored to their rights in the former suit at the time it was effected. Per PONTIFEX J —In cases where the sanction of the Court is required as where there is an infant concerned each party is bound to see that the materials on which the sanction of the Court is asked for are unimpeachable Per PONTIFEX J — Quære —Whether in this suit if the questions were found to arise it would be necessary for the Court to consider whether it would be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside Per GARTH C J —Semble —Even if it only appeared that the compromise had been entered into and sanctioned under an entire mistake of the parties and of the Court with regard to the subject matter of the agreement it ought to be set aside under s 20 of the Contract Act Per GARTH C J —In a substantive suit by a minor to set aside a compromise made with the sanction of the Court obtained by fraud or mistake it is not the province of the Court to enquire whether it would or would not be for the benefit of the minor that the compromise should be set aside though it might be otherwise on an application for review to the Court which granted the sanction SOLOMON v ABDOOL AZEEZ

25 ———— Effect of setting aside compromise on right of appeal —In a suit brought on behalf of an infant daughter by her mother as guardian a decision was given partly for and partly against the defendant who thereupon filed an appeal which he afterwards withdrew in accordance with the terms of a compromise purporting to have been made with the mother and daughter Subsequently at the suit of the daughter the compromise was set aside as fraudulent and collusive and a review of the original decision, in so far as it was adverse to the plaintiff's interest was allowed The defendant then applied that his appeal might be revived but his application was rejected by the High Court on the ground that he had deprived himself of his opportunity of appeal by his own fraudulent conduct. Held by the Judicial Committee that the effect of setting aside the compromise was to remit both parties to their original rights and that if the plaintiff was to be allowed to be heard against so much of the original judgment as was unfavourable to her the defendant must similarly be heard against so much of the same judgment as was unfavourable to him KHAJOOROONISSA v POUSHAN JEHAN I. 63. ——— Execution of decree—Compromise in execution of decree—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code ss 257A 647—Although a Court executing a decree is bound by the terms thereof and cannot add to or vary or go behind them the effect of s 375 read with s 647 of the Civil Procedure Code is that when a decree is put into execution the proceedings taken therefor amount to a separate litigation in which the parties can enter into a compromise much in the same manner as in a regular suit. Such a compromise does not extinguish the decree and the Court executing the decree is bound subject to the conditions indicated by s 375 to give effect to the compromise. In execution proceedings the word suit in s 375 must with reference to s 647 be read as meaning execution of decree. By reason of the words in s. 375 lawful agreement or compromise the provisions of s. 257A become applicable to such a case and so long as the requirements of that section are satisfied, the compromise become a part of the decree itself and—at least as between the decree holder and the judgment-debtor—can be given effect to in execution of the decree. When such a compromise has been duly made and sanctioned by the Court executing the decree neither the decree-holder nor the judgment debtor can resile from the position assumed by them in the matter of the compromise. Even if such a compromise has been irregularly sanctioned by the Court executing the decree—the irregularity not amounting to want of jurisdiction—the compromise must take effect until the order sanctioning it is set aside and until that happens the parties are bound by it in all proceedings relating to the execution of the decree and where they have acted upon it they are estopped thereafter from questioning its validity. Sita Ram v Dasrath Das I L R 5 All 492 followed. Devi Ras v Gokal Prasad I L R 3 All 585 Ram Lakhan Rai v Bakhtaur Rai I L R 6 All 623 Fateh Muhammad v Gopal Das I L R 7 All 424 Ganga v Murlidhar I L R 4 All 240 Sheo Golam Lal v Beni Prosad I L R 5 Calc 27 Lakshmana v Sukayya Ba I L R 7 Mad 400 Yella Chetti v Munisami Reddi I L R 6 Mad 101 Pisan v Attorney General of Gibraltar L R 5 C P 516 and Sadasiva Pillai v Ramalinga Pillai L R 2 I A 219 referred to. During an inquiry before a Presidency Magistrate after the evidence for the prosecution was taken the Magistrate examined the accused under ss 209 and 312 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The accused was examined in Marathi but the questions and answers were recorded in English. The Magistrate deposed at the trial that it was the invariable practice in his Court to take down depositions in English and that he could not himself have accurately recorded the prisoner's statement in Marathi. He also deposed that the statement was correctly recorded in English and that each question and answer when recorded was interpreted to the accused in Marathi and that the accused then made his mark at the end of the recorded statement. He further stated that there were at hand native subordinate officials of his Court who could have recorded the statement in Marathi but that he himself had not sufficient knowledge of Marathi as to be able to read what was written by such a subordinate or to satisfactorily check or test the correctness with which it represented the statement made by the accused. Held that assuming that it was practicable to record the statement in Marathi and that consequently it was irregular with reference to s 364 of the Code to record it in English, the statement was nevertheless admissible in evidence under s 533 the irregularity not having injured the accused as to his defence on the merits. Jai Narayan Rai v Queen Empress I L R, 17 Calc 862 dissented from. He replied that he had kept it and would show it. He said he had buried the property in the fields He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed and with his own hands disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept He made a second statement when pointing out the spot to the effect that he had buried the property there It was contended that those statements were inadmissible having been made when the accused was in custody of the police Held (1) that the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession, as they suggested the inference that the prisoner committed the crime and even if not intended by the accused as a confession of guilt they were an admission of a criminating circumstance and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused, as showing that he had not come by the property honestly and were therefore properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confessions made by a person in custody of the police (2) That neither of the above statements was admissible in evidence under explanation 1 of s 8 of the Evidence Act I of 1872 as evidence of the conduct of the accused. S 8 so far as it admits a statement as included in the word "conduct, must be read in connection with ss 25 and 26 and cannot admit a statement as evidence which would be shut out by those sections. CONFISCATION OF PROPERTY IN OUDH.

1. ——————— Limitation—Release of Government rights—Settlement—Cause of action—House property in Lucknow of which the Government had assumed possession as confiscated under the proclamations issued by Lord Canning and Sir James Outram in March 1858 was released under an order passed on the 6th July 1863 whereby the Government abandoned the confiscation and left former owners to their rights This property had previously to the confiscation, belonged to one M K Lands in Oudh confiscated under Lord Canning's proclamation were in October 1863 directed to be settled with the heirs of M K In a suit brought in March 18 5 by a plaintiff who claimed a share of the house property and lands as heirs of the heirs of M K against a defendant who was an heir of M A and who had obtained possession of the houses and lands under the orders passed for the release of the one and the settlement of the other the defendant pleaded that the entire property had come into her possession in 1850 under a gift from M K and that the plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation. Held (first) in respect of the house property that if the defendant was in possession at the time when the proclamations were issued, the question of limitation must be decided as if there never had been a confiscation and (second) in respect of the lands that no question of limitation could arise since the suit was brought within twelve years from the date of the Government order for settlement, under which alone any title to the lands could have been acquired by either of the parties. JEHAN KADR v. AFSAR BAHU I. L. R., 4 Calc., 727

2. ——— Lord Canning's proclamation 1858, Effect of—Re-grant of confiscated lands.—The effect of Lord Canning's proclamation of the 15th March 1858 was to divest all the landed property from the proprietors in Oudh and to transfer it to and vest it in the British Government. Consequently all who since that date claim title to such property must claim through the Government. Where a re-grant is made to a former owner the new title will depend entirely on the terms of the re-grant and if such re-grant is made for life only no suit can be maintained to rectify an alleged mistake and for declaration of an absolute title according to the tenure of the sunnuds by which the property was held under the old dynasty and prior to the confiscation. MIRZA JEHAN KADR v. DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF LUCKNOW L. R., 6 I. A., 63

3. ——— Property standing and registered in name of one party but admitted to belong to another—Registration for fiscal purposes.—In Oudh, before its annexation to the British rule, a Rajah was a talukhdar of a large taluka. A younger branch of his family had a separate mehal in the possession of A wholly distinct from and independent of the taluka the Rajah possessed as representing the elder branch of the family. The Oudh Government for fiscal purposes included A's mehal with the Rajah's taluka, so that the Rajah as the elder branch of the family represented A's mehal at the Court at Lucknow notwithstanding that A remained in undisturbed possession as absolute owner paying through the Rajah for his mehal a proportion of the jumma fixed on the taluka. This relation between the Rajah and A subsisted up to the time of the annexation of Oudh by the British Government. While the Government was making a settlement with the land owners, and A was about to apply for a distinct settlement of his mehal, he and after him his widow was induced by the Rajah not to do so, the Rajah in letters fully recognising A's absolute right to the mehal. After the suppression of the rebellion in Oudh and the Government had recognised the taluka hereditary with its rights, a provisional settlement of the taluka in [illegible] mehal was made with the Rajah but before a sunnud was granted to him, Government confiscated half his estates for concealment of arms. The Rajah suppressed the fact of the trust relation of the mehal of A and contrived that it should be included in the half part of the estate the Government had confiscated, which mehal the Government as a reward granted to Oudh loyalists. A's widow brought a suit against the Government and the grantees for the restoration of the mehal and for a settlement. The Chief Commissioner held that, as the Rajah was the registered owner of the mehal of A included in his taluka, it had been properly forfeited. Such finding reversed on appeal on the ground that A was the acknowledged cestui que trust of the Rajah and that A's widow as equitable owner was not affected as between her and the Government by the act of confiscation of half the Rajah's taluka. 4. ——— Confiscation and restoration of lands in Oudh in 1858 and of immoveables in Lucknow—Gift—Fraud.—On a claim for a share in property consisting of (1) immoveables in Lucknow and (2) revenue-paying land in a district of Oudh, the defence was title by gift with possession from the former owner a member of the family through which the plaintiff claimed. As to the immoveables in Lucknow they having been included in the confiscation which, having followed the capture of the town in 1858 was subsequently abandoned without any intention on the part of Government to make a re-grant in favour of any person, the result in regard to the present question was the same as if no such event had occurred. The other property (2) came under the general confiscation of Oudh lands in 1858, and also was restored through subsequent settlement operations in which the final order relating to the land in question, was to the effect that settlement should be made with the "heirs" of the previous owner. Held that the above did not preclude the defence of exclusive title by gift; the order last mentioned, on its true construction, only designating all those who might take under and through the previous owner (deceased at the time of settlement) without excluding any claimant, save those who might claim adversely to such title. The Government did not make the settlement which followed the confiscation, make any arbitrary or wholly new redistribution of estates or proceed as if the existence of previous titles (although they had been brought to an end) was to go for nothing. The enquiry in most cases was as to who would have been entitled had there been no confiscation. As to both classes of property, the gift was maintained. JEHAN KADR v. AFSAR JAHAN BEGUM I. L. 22 ——————— Moral consideration—Promise to pay at majority debt during infancy—Promise to pay barred debt —The general rule of law is that a consideration merely moral is not valuable consideration such as would support a promise But there are instances of enforceable promises which formerly were referred to the now exploded principle of previous moral obligation and which are still held to be binding although that principle has been rejected Amongst those instances is a promise after full age to pay a debt contracted during infancy and a promise in renewal of a debt barred by the law of limitation. The efficacy of such promises is now based upon the principle that where the consideration was originally beneficial to the party promising and he be protected from liability by some provision of the statute or common law meant for his advantage he may renounce the benefit of that law and if he promise to pay the debt he is bound by the law to perform that promise. D executed a razinama in favour of the plaintiff on 20th August 1868 transferring certain lands to the latter The plaintiff after giving the usual kabuliat to the Collector was put in possession of the lands On the 7th April 1869 T obtained a money decree against D and on the 3rd July 1869 attached the lands as belonging to D Held that a decree of 1867 which plaintiff held against D though time barred, in 1868 was (being then still unsatisfied) a good consideration for D's razinama in 1868 in plaintiff's favour TILLACKCHAND HINDUMAL v JITAMAL SUDARAM 10 Bom 206

5 ———— Duration of contract—Effect of recital in regard to control over operative words —The parties during several years had transactions consisting of the deliveries of produce by the defendants to the plaintiff's agent under advances upon separate contracts specifying prices and of consignments by the defendants through the plaintiffs A purchase account' and an interest account kept between them resulted in a general account and in 1872 a large sum was due thereon to the plaintiffs to whom in 1873 the defendants sent letters mortgaging property with instruments of title accompanying In the beginning of 1874 the parties entered into a written agreement which described the balance due in respect of previous advances as the block account comprising also an interest account and the transactions proceeded The intention was shown that the advances should be liquidated by returns but the only date mentioned from which an inference could be drawn as to the intended duration of the arrangement between the parties show at 30th June 1875 In this suit brought in December 1875 it was contended that the right construction of the agreement of 1874 required that it should continue to subsist (unless rescinded either by mutual agreement or on breach of its stipulations by one party justifying its rescission by the other) until the liquidation of the balance by returns at all events as regarded the block account In order to the working of an agreement for a liquidation in such a way it would have been necessary to imply obligations for which no express provision had been made nothing for instance having been fixed as to the extent or duration of the business or as to the rates at which produce was to be offered or accepted Held that such provisions could not now be supplied and that the stipulations as to the block account were binding only during the continuance of the arrangement for the conduct of the business by the parties such arrangement being terminable at will after the 30th June 1875 The letters of 1873 and the documents of title deposited with them were held to constitute a security for the general balance due from the defendants to the plaintiffs and not only a security for advances on certain of the contracts referred to in a paragraph in the nature of a recital for the latter was not necessarily repugnant to the wider construction, and the operative words were wide enough to apply to all the transactions between the parties The construction of an ambiguous stipulation in a written agreement may be governed or qualified by a recital but if the intention is clearly to be collected from the operative words that intention is not to be defeated or controlled because it may go beyond what is expressed in the recital MARCAR v SIGG I L R, 2 Mad. 239

16 ———— Contract for freight—June shipment—Naming probable date of arrival of steamer—Later arrival no breach of contract—Estoppel—Notice of readiness to load —The defendant in April 1891 contracted with the plaintiffs for freight for 3/5 tons seed wheat etc by any first class steamer etc (subject to safe arrival) June shipment Goods to be alongside in time to be all taken in on or before the second day after notice that steamer is ready for cargo otherwise difference of freight at market rate to be payable on demand as liquidated damages etc On the 29th May defendant wrote saying he would be glad to know the name and probable date of arrival of the steamer On the 3rd June the plaintiffs replied declaring the S S County of York against the engagement and adding in a postscript that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant The S S County of York arrived in Bombay on the 10th June but from unforeseen circumstances had not a berth in the dock and was not ready to load until the 23rd instant In the meantime on the 18th June the defendant repudiated the contract on the ground that having been led by the plaintiffs to expect that the ship would be ready to load on the 12th instant he had made telegraphic arrangements on that fact ing and the ship not being ready he was compelled to ship his goods by other steamers in order to fulfil his engagements The plaintiffs accordingly relet the freight on defendant s account and brought this suit for the loss incurred in so doing Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed for that nothing had occurred to alter the original contract which gave them the whole of June in which to provide a steamer The statement made by the plaintiffs on the 3rd of June (in answer to the defendant s enquiries as to the probable date of the arrival of the steamer) that the steamer would be ready to load on or about the 12th instant was not a promise but a mere expression of opinion. The question of estoppel did not arise On the 22nd June the plaintiffs gave their shippers amongst others the defendant a notice to the following effect As the County of York will be in dock to morrow ready to receive cargo we have to request that your cargo be down not later than Wednesday the 24th instant etc etc Quare —Whether this was a "notice that the steamer was ready for cargo" as required by the contract BETTS CRAIG & CO v MARTIN I L R 16 Bom. 389

monthly lots at intervals of four weeks. He also contended that the shipment on the 9th December 1890 was a late shipment and that he was not therefore bound to accept the goods under the contract. As to the last contention the plaintiffs alleged that by the custom of Bombay in the case of contracts made with members of the Native Piece-goods Association the date of the carrier's weight note was to be regarded as the date of shipment and that under such a contract as the one in question delivery to the Railway Company or other inland carrier was equivalent to shipment. This custom it was alleged originated in consequence of the above Association having agreed that all piece goods ordered out by its members should be conveyed to Bombay by certain lines of steamers only and by no others. It was stated that unless some such custom existed it would in many instances be impossible for Bombay merchants to carry out their contracts as no steamers of the selected lines might be available. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at the hearing found that the alleged custom existed and was generally accepted and understood by merchants and dealers in Bombay. On reference to the High Court —Held that the contract finally agreed only was that 25 bales relating to No 3053 (i e the documents of the 18th April) should be purchased on defendant's account at an all round advance of 1*d* per pair on the original limits. 18 ———— Sale of goods—Non acceptance of goods —Contract for goods to be ordered from Europe—Performance of contract by offer of goods of same description not ordered out for purchasers but bought by vendors in Bombay —On the 7th August the defendants commissioned the plaintiffs to order out from Europe 500 cwt copper braziers September shipment assorted in the manner set out in the indent signed by the defendants free on board Bombay harbour at the rate of £53 5 per ton On the same day the plaintiffs sent a reply to the defendants' order in their usual form partly lithographed and partly written as follows —

We have the pleasure to inform you that we have received a telegram from our Manchester friends and so far as regards the cyphers therein used we learn that they advise the following purchases which will be invoiced to you at your limit subject to confirmation by letter as usual Order this day hundred bundles of copper braziers at £53 5 per ton free on board Bombay As a fact however no telegram had been received from the plaintiffs Manchester friends and the plaintiffs had not learned that they had advised the purchases referred to in their reply The acceptance of the plaintiffs offer was really based on the plaintiffs view of the probabilities of the copper market The agents in England were unable to carry out the order and it remained unexecuted On the 20th October the plaintiffs having negotiated with one Naga Ducha to take over from him a September shipment of copper by the S S Merton Hall answering to the defendants order and for the purpose of fulfilling it wrote to the defendants as follows —

We beg to inform you of the arrival of the S S Merton Hall with hundred packages of goods sold to you as per agreement No 213 and have therefore to request payment of the cash for those goods according to the terms of the agreement. The plaintiffs negotiations however with Naga Ducha fell through and they were unable to supply the defendants with the goods from the Merton Hall The defendants on the 30th October wrote through their solicitors to the plaintiffs stating that they believed the goods never came to Bombay and that they considered the contract at an end The plaintiffs however on the 29th October had succeeded in purchasing a September shipment of goods from one Beg Mahomed corresponding to those ordered by the defendants They then on the 31st October wrote to the defendants informing them that it was a mistake of their clerk to advise the arrival of the defendants goods per Merton Hall and handing the defendants invoice of 100 bundles arrived ex Tulan Head The defendants discovered that the plaintiffs had not ordered out these goods but had purchased them in Bombay and on that ground they refused to accept them The price of copper had then fallen The plaintiffs sold the goods by auction and brought this suit against the defendants to recover the difference between the price realized by the sale and the price which by their contract the defendants had agreed to pay It was admitted by the plaintiffs witnesses that it was intended at the time the defendants gave their order that the goods should be ordered out from England by the plaintiffs and that this was the invariable course of business of the plaintiffs firm—the present case forming the only instance to the contrary Held that the defendants were not bound to accept the goods offered by the plaintiffs and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the amount sued for An importing firm which accepts a commission to order out goods at a fixed rate and undertakes that they shall be invoiced to the person giving the order at that rate does not (in the absence of proof of usage to the contrary) fulfil his contract by obtaining goods answering to the terms of the order from another firm in Bombay and tendering them to the person giving the order BOMBAY UNITED MERCHANTS COMPANY v DOOLUBRAM SAKULCHAND I L R. 12 Bom 50 dock and remained at the bottom in twenty three feet of water for sixteen hours when she was raised and her cargo discharged The coal was pronounced unfit for a voyage to Bombay Extensive repairs to the ship were found necessary and she was use less until the 6th October The plaintiff sued for damages for non delivery of the coal. The defendants relied on the last clause of the agreement as exempting them from liability Held that the defendants were not liable The Rubens was lost for the purpose for which she was required under the contract ie for a voyage in fulfilment of a July August shipment and the defendants having proved that the coal had been duly shipped on board the vessel so lost were exempt under the last clause of the agreement from liability for non delivery It was argued that until the name of the carrying ship was declared to the plaintiff as purchaser neither the ship nor the coal was assigned to the contract and therefore the loss could not be within the contract Held that if such a condition was intended it should have been expressed. The appropriation of certain goods to the contract by the vendors (the defendants) the placing them on board the Rubens and doing all in their power to despatch them to Bombay in fulfilment of the contract were enough to entitle them to the protection of the last clause of the agreement NUSSERVANJI JEHANGIR KHAMBATA v VOLKART BROTHERS I L R 13 Bom 15

The contract which the defendants failed to fulfil was a contract to deliver the Ethelaida cargo which they were always ready and willing to deliver The option rested with the defendants whether they would deliver 2 500 or 3 500 tons or any intermediate quantity and upon no principle could the Court exercise that option for them and declare that they were liable to deliver more than a cargo of 2 500 tons. February and March shipments ordinarily arrive in Bombay on or before the 30th April following All of the coal contracted for was duly delivered by the defendants except 1 376 tons which still remained to be delivered to the plaintiffs By a letter dated 25th April 1896 addressed to the plaintiff the defendants declared the S S Eastby Abbey as the ship carrying the said 1 376 tons of coal remaining due under the contract There was no evidence of any appropriation of coal on board the Eastby Abbey to the purpose of the above contract prior to this declaration It subsequently transpired that the Eastby Abbey had run on a reef in the Red Sea on the 16th April and so seriously damaged that being taken to Suez (where such of her cargo as had not been thrown overboard was sold) she was found unable to proceed to Bombay and she returned to England for repairs The plaintiff sued the defendants for non delivery of 1,376 tons of coal. 25 ——— Sale of goods—Special place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter —Assessment of damages—Contract Act (IX of 1872) ss 49 94 and 231 —Bought and sold notes of Purneah indigo seed provided The seed to be delivered at any place in Bengal in March and April 1891 It was added the place of delivery to be mentioned hereafter The buyer made mention of this on the 20th March 1891 in a letter to the broker for both parties This letter specifying Howrah railway station as the place was forwarded to the vendor who replied that he would deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea This the buyer declined. The vendor and the buyer each insisting that the place named by him was the proper one for delivery the buyer refused to accept at the vendor s godowns or at any place other than Howrah station The vendor remained for a certain time ready and willing to deliver at his godowns at Sulkea and the buyer not accepting delivery at that place the vendor declared the contract cancelled. The buyer then sued him for breach of the contract to deliver at the place mentioned by the buyer On the question whether the vendor had discharged his liability by readiness and willingness to deliver at his own godowns at Sulkea —Held that the choice of place given originally by the contract to the buyer subject only to the express contract that it must be in Bengal and to the implied one that it must be reasonable had not been converted by the words about mention thereafter into a deferred question to be settled by a subsequent agreement The buyer according to the contract already subsisting had the right to fix the place There was a special promise in the contract as to the delivery and to complete its terms nothing more was required than a mention by the buyer of a reasonable place within Bengal This had been made by him. The contract therefore did not fall within s. 94 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) dealing with cases where there has been no special promise as to delivery and fixing the place of production as the place for delivery but rather resembled what was contemplated in s 49 And the buyer was entitled to damages on the contract. exchange for the goods. Held that, F not having had an opportunity of inspecting the goods as provided by the contract the tender made as aforesaid by P was not such an offer of performance of the contract as F was bound to accept Held also that F was not bound to accept a tender of railway receipts for goods subject (as some of these were) to demurrage nor for goods on which freight had not been paid (as was the case with some of these goods) nor for goods that were not available on the 31st May as in the present case In order to establish a valid tender of the goods it was for P to show that had F taken the railway receipts the railway company would have been bound to deliver the goods upon production of the receipts and F was under no duty to point out to P that the tender was defective F's duty under the contract arose when a sufficient tender was made to him and not till then. Failure to justify an alleged breach of contract upon one ground only which is found insufficient does not disentitle the defendant to rely upon other grounds which his rights under the contract entitle him to rely upon. Cowan v Milbern L R., 2 Exch 230 and Mothoormohun Roy v Bank of Bengal I L R 3 Calc., 392 referred to MOTICHAND v FULCHAND I L. 28 ———— Tender of railway receipts for goods subject to freight—Railway receipts for goods subject to demurrage—Defective tender—Estoppel.—Under a contract of sale of goods it was provided that if instead of the goods railway receipts for them be tendered they must be handed over to the buyers 48 hours before the goods were liable to demurrage under the present term of 72 hours granted by the railway company that sellers must be present at the time of delivery to inspect the weighing and sampling and in their default buyers will weigh and sample and sellers must abide by the result. On the last day of delivery the plaintiffs tendered to the defendants certain railway receipts purporting to cover the goods under the contract and blank endorsed by the consignee named in the receipts and demanded payment of the goods they did not offer to give delivery of the goods covered by the receipts The defendants refused to accept the railway receipts until they were endorsed by the consignee named in them to the plaintiff and by the plaintiff to the defendants It was subsequently found that freight had not been paid on the receipts and that demurrage was payable on some of the goods but the defendants did not at the time raise any objection on that ground. Held that having regard to the terms of the contract the defendants were not bound to accept the railway receipts or upon their being tendered to pay the price of the goods as demanded. That the plaintiffs had not complied with the terms of the clause relating to delivery by railway receipts and it was open to the defendants to rely upon that objection and they cannot be said to have waived all questions as to freight demurrage and the tendering of railway receipts instead of the goods themselves That the offer made by the plaintiffs did not constitute a readiness and willingness on their part to deliver the goods. 29 ———— Collateral agreement - Contract Act ss 21 65—Mistake of law—Agreement to secure repayment of loan collateral to primary obligation.—By an agreement in writing defendants trustees of a temple in consideration of an advance of money which they represented was required to pay off debts incurred for the benefit of the temple granted to plaintiff a lease of the right to manage the temple lands and plaintiff promised that he would repay himself out of the profits to be derived from the lands and that neither the defendants nor their family property should be made liable for the debt In a suit by plaintiff against a tenant of the temple lands this lease was held to be void for illegality Defendants subsequently resumed management and plaintiff sued them to recover the money advanced by him. It was found that the agreement was entered into by both parties under a mistake as to the validity of the lease Held that assuming s 65 of the Contract Act was not intended to vary the rule that a mistake of law is no ground for relieving a party from his own contract plaintiff was nevertheless entitled to recover on the ground that the agreement which provided for repayment was collateral and had failed. An agreement that an obligation which is contracted shall be discharged in some particular mode is collateral to the primary contract which created the obligation though the two agreements may be mixed up in one contract KRISHNAN v SANKARA VARMA I. 31. ——— Agreement to share costs of litigation to be prosecuted to its furthest limits—Failure on advice to appeal to Privy Council —Plaintiffs having sought to recover from defendants their share of the costs of certain litigation which plaintiffs had set agoing at the instance of defendant's father who was jointly interested with plaintiffs in certain property in suit but who wanted the means to prosecute the litigation for its recovery and who accordingly executed an ikrarnamah agreeing to share the costs of the necessary litigation proportionably with plaintiffs provided they furnished the funds for prosecuting that litigation to the furthest limits and the said litigation having terminated adversely to the interests of both plaintiffs and defendants without any appeal having been preferred to the Privy Council and defendants having repudiated all responsibility for costs on the ground of default in prosecution of litigation to the furthest possible limit —Held that as plaintiffs had merely undertaken to furnish the means for carrying on the litigation but had not actually undertaken the conduct of that litigation and as it was not in evidence that defendants had wished to go up to the Privy Council and to this end had made a demand on but had been frustrated by plaintiffs the plaintiffs were entitled to recover proportionate costs in the concerted litigation with costs in the present suit proportioned to the amount thus obtained by them. In a suit brought on the basis of the ikrarnamah to set aside a lease granted by the widow —Held there is nothing in any statute law which renders such a provision inoperative neither ss 10 and 15 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) nor any principle underlying them is applicable to it; it is not an unreasonable provision; there was no absence of equity in the arrangement and effect should be given to it KULDIP SINGH v KHETRANI KOER [I. The plaintiffs paid one day s demurrage in respect of the delay in discharging the 264 tons and now brought an action to recover the same from the defendant Held that the defendant was liable The contract of the defendant (by incorporation of the charter party) to take delivery within the lay days or to pay demurrage being absolute he could only excuse non-performance of his contract by showing it was due either to default of the captain of the ship or of the plaintiffs themselves neither of which had been shown The plaintiffs were not to blame for any difficulties occurring by reason of there being other purchasers That was the well known nature of the trade and it was for the defendant if he desired protection in this respect to provide for it in his contract Neither were the plaintiffs bound to be able to deliver to the defendant at the rate of 400 tons a day under his two contracts The stipulation in each of the two contracts that delivery should be taken at a rate of not less than 200 tons per diem was not one on which the defendant could insist but was an independent stipulation in favour of the cargo VOLKART BROTHERS v NUSSERVANJI JEHANGIR KHAMBATTA I. 41. ———— Agreement for permission to quarry—License Non-renewal of—Implied condition—By an agreement (in renewal of similar agreements for the two previous years) dated the 3rd September 1888 the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff rent for a piece of hilly ground at the rate of R329 per month for one year during which time the defendant was to be allowed to blast stones and carry on the work of quarrying to the extent of seven crow bars, such quarrying to be done at such places as the plaintiff had pointed out or should choose to point out from time to time The rent to be paid was arrived at on a calculation of R47 per crow-bar and was to be payable whether defendant employed the seven crow bars or less. The defendant by the sixth clause of the agreement further undertook as follows —"As regards the police arrangement and other expenses at the time of blasting stones, and obtaining an order or licens etc and as to any other kind of expenses, risk and responsibility all these are upon me I will duly pay you at the rate of R329 per month clear until the fixed time The defendant was a stone contractor and had been employed in this work of quarrying all his life and for the previous two years on this very spot, and was well aware that blasting could not be carried on without a license from the authorities which was revocable at any time, and required renewal annually At the time of the agreement the defendant was in possession of a license which expired on the 31st December 1888. After that date the authorities refused to renew the license on the ground that the quarry where operations were being carried on was surrounded by houses on all sides and the defendant thereupon refused to continue the payment of the monthly rent of R329 The plaintiff accordingly brought this suit in the Small Cause Court for three months' rent at the above rate Held looking at the nature of the contract, that it must be taken to have been the intention of the parties to it that the monthly sum of R329 should only be payable so long as quarrying was permitted by the authorities and that there was no unconditional contract to pay R329 in all events in cl. 6 of the agreement or elsewhere Taylor v *Caldwell 3 B and S 826 32 L. 42. ———— Personal contract—Assignment—Suit by assignee—When considerations connected with the person with whom a contract is made form a material element of the contract, it may well be that such a contract on that ground alone is one which cannot be assigned without the promisor's consent so as to entitle the assignee to sue him on it. Stevens v Benning 1 K and J., 168 referred to. By an agreement in writing dated 13th December 1882 and executed in favour of M D and H D, who were the proprietors of an indigo concern, the defendant R agreed to sow indigo, taking the seed and tandi from M D and H D's concern, on four bighas of land out of his holding selected, measured, and prepared by M D and H D or their amlah; and when the indigo was fit for weeding "to weed, reweed, and turn it up to the extent necessary according to the directions of the amlah of the concern;" and when the indigo was fit for reaping, to "reap and load it on carts according to the directions of the amlah of the concern; and if any portion of the said indigo land" was in the judgment of the amlah of the concern found bad, in lieu thereof to get some other land in his holding measured, and "on the land so measured in Bysack" to "sow Bhadoi crops only which will be reaped in Bhadur The defendant also agreed not to sow on the land measured any crop that might "cause obstacle to the cultivation of indigo, and, if he did so, "the amlah of the concern should be at liberty to destroy such crop," and he should not "oppose the destruction thereof nor sue in the Courts, Civil or Criminal for destruction of the same." As regards a breach of any condition, it was provided "If I or my heirs depart from the conditions of this indigo engagement directly or indirectly or in any way neglect to cultivate or do not cultivate indigo, I or they shall pay to the above named M D and H D damages for the same from my or their person and property and shall raise no plea or objection. In 1886, M D and H D assigned the entire benefit of this agreement to the plaintiff In a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for damages on account of his alleged failure to cultivate indigo for the plaintiff's concern in accordance with the terms of the agreement of the 13th December 1882 —Held that the agreement must be construed as one which had been entered into by the defendant with reference to the personal position circumstances and qualifications of M D and H D and their amlah; and that therefore it was not assignable so as to give the assignee a right to sue upon it in his own name for a breach of contract. Subsequently the plaintiff sold the site of her former bazar together with some other land. Held that if the payment was to be made in consideration of her abolishing the bazar she was not entitled to it after she had parted with the land upon which the bazar stood That if the payment was in consideration of the plaintiff undertaking not to establish a new bazar within two miles of the defendant's bazar she had disentitled herself to a continuance of the payment from the time when she made it impossible for herself to secure the fulfilment of the condition by parting with the land. 44. ——— Consideration—Compromise of a bonâ fide claim—Good consideration—Agreement to lend money on mortgage—Delay in completion of agreement—Subsequent agreement to pay interest from a certain date—Consideration for such agreement—Right to rescind—Time of essence of contract—Suit by lender against borrower—On 31st August 1891 the plaintiff agreed to lend the defendant R30 000 on a mortgage By the agreement the mortgagor (defendant) was to clear the title and the time fixed for completion of the agreement was eight days from its date The mortgage was not completed within the stipulated time in consequence of the non production of the title-deeds by prior mortgagees who were to be paid off out of the money to be advanced by the plaintiff On the 9th September 1891 the plaintiff's solicitors wrote to the defendant reminding him that the time for completion had expired and stating that the plaintiff would require interest to be paid on the money which he had with him lying idle on the defendant's account On the 24th September 1891 the plaintiff formally tendered the R30 000 to the defendant but as no mortgage deed was then ready for execution the money was not then paid. The plaintiff was always ready and willing to advance the money but in consequence of the defendant's delay he insisted on interest being paid from the 24th September 1891 The title deeds were ultimately produced at the end of November or the beginning of December and on 7th December 1891 the draft mortgage was sent to the defendant for approval It contained a clause stipulating for payment of interest from 24th September 1891 On the 9th December 1891 the plaintiff had an interview with the defendant The two points then discussed were (1) what time after due date should be allowed to the defendant (mortgagor) for payment of interest (2) whether interest on the principal sum should run from the 24th September 1891 On the first point the plaintiff gave way allowing defendant fifteen days instead of eight as originally provided As to the second point he declined to advance the money unless interest was paid from the 24th September 1891 The defendant ultimately agreed to this The mortgage-deed was duly engrossed with a stipulation for payment of interest from the 24th September 1891 and the 26th January 1892 was fixed as the day for execution On that day however one of the defendant's daughters who had to execute the deed was absent and the plaintiff refused to advance the money until her signature was obtained. Subsequently the defendant refused to sign the deed on the ground that it contained the clause for payment of interest from 24th September 1891 He contended that he was not liable to pay interest from that date. The plaintiff brought this suit claiming R1,865 12-0 as damages for the defendant's breach of agreement The lower Court held that although the original agreement of 31st August 1891 mentioned no date from which interest should run the defendant on the 9th December 1891 had agreed to pay it from 24th September 1891 and had made no objection on the point until February 1892 The defendant contended that if such an agreement was made on the 9th December 1891 it was without consideration but the Court held that the plaintiff was at that date at liberty to rescind the agreement altogether and that he had consented not to rescind in consideration of being paid interest from the 24th December 1891 The lower Court accordingly passed a decree for the plaintiff Semble—That time was not of the essence of the contract but held that in any case under the circumstances there was consideration for the agreement made by the defendant to pay interest from the 24th September The plaintiff clearly regarded himself as entitled to rescind and at the defendant's request agreed to forbear to do so if the defendant would consent to pay interest from 24th September 1891 The claim of the right to rescind was undoubtedly a real one and made in good faith and the forbearance to enforce it might well be an inducement to the defendant to agree to the plaintiff's terms and the principle laid down in Miles v New Zealand Alford Estate Co L R 32 Ch D 266 applied. In a suit brought by the plaintiff on the contract oral evidence was given to show that the contract was really made between the plaintiff and the defendant The Judge of the Small Cause Court found that the mistake did not mislead the defendant and gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff contingent on the opinion of the High Court as to whether the mistake in the sold note was a bar to the plaintiff's suit for damages on the contract Held that there was a contract between the parties for breach of which the plaintiff could sue for damages. Of the rest they refused to take delivery when tendered because it was not of the quality contracted for Held that the plaintiff s suit for the balance of the price of the part delivered and for damages for non-acceptance of delivery of the rest failed. If the plaintiffs—neither they nor their broker understanding Chinese—did not assent to the term written by the defendant then there was no contract entered into to buy If on the contrary the plaintiffs had assented to that term then the paddy was not of the quality required by the contract AH SHAIN SHOKE v MOOTHIA CHETTY to secure the profit or ascertain the loss before the Vayda day The contracts were in the usual mercantile form and were entered into through brokers, the principals not being brought into contact with each other until after the contract was made. S's procedure was also similar S was a mukadam and guarantee broker to the plaintiffs and he too, entered into these contracts as a speculation intending to settle them before the Vayda day but prepared if forced to do so, to perform them in kind. Held that the contracts sued on were not shown to have been agreements by way of wager It was a highly speculative mode of doing business, but there is no law against speculation as there is against gambling Contracts are not wagering contracts, unless it be the intention of both contracting parties, at the time of entering into the contracts, under no circumstances to call for or give delivery from or to, each other In this case, even the defendant—seeing that he did not know with whom contracts might be made on his behalf by his brokers—must have contemplated the possibility of being called on to give or take delivery TOD v. LAKHMIDAS PURSHOTAMDAS I. In order to constitute a wagering contract neither party should intend to perform the contract itself but only to pay the differences. In order to ascertain the real intentions of the parties, the Court must look at all the surrounding circumstances and will even go behind a written provision of the contract to judge for itself whether such provision was inserted merely for the purpose of concealing the real nature of the transaction. Tod v Lakhmidas I L R 16 Bom., 441 Eshoor v Venkatasubba I L R., 17 Mad., 480 and University Stock Exchange v Strachan, L R., 1896 Ap Ca., 166 referred to. The defendant employed the plaintiff from time to time as a broker to purchase Government paper and shares of the Manekji Petit Spinning and Weaving Company The plaintiff did so to the extent of many lakhs of rupees. No delivery was given or taken but the differences only between the contract price and the price at the date of settlement (the Vaida day in each month) were paid or received by the defendant. The plaintiff now sued the defendant on two promissory notes given to the plaintiff by the defendant in respect of differences due by him in respect of the contracts thus made on his behalf. The defendant pleaded that he was not liable the contracts being wagering contracts. It appeared from the evidence that the practice in the bazar (which was followed in this case) was for brokers to enter into such contracts in their own name and not to disclose the principals. The broker became liable to give or take delivery The defendant stated that he did not know the persons to whom the plaintiff sold or from whom he purchased. Held (1) on the evidence that the defendant authorized the plaintiff as his broker to contract on his behalf, but in the plaintiff's own name on the understanding that the defendant would indemnify the plaintiff and pay him brokerage in respect of the transactions entered into by him on behalf or for benefit of defendant. Accordingly the plaintiff did enter into contracts in his own name with third parties. The defendant was not directly a party to them nor did his name appear anywhere in the contracts themselves. (2) That the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the losses which he paid to third parties in respect of the contracts made by the plaintiff on the defendant's behalf, and that such losses were a valid consideration pro tanto for the notes sued upon. No doubt so far as the defendant was concerned, all the contracts were merely wagering or gambling transactions, but there was no evidence to show that, so far as the third parties were concerned, they were otherwise than genuine The plaintiff was not, as between himself and the defendant, the principal in the transactions. He was merely the broker with a personal liability to the third parties. There was nothing to show that as between himself and the third parties the contracts were not perfectly genuine. The mere delivery and payment of differences on hand was a matter of subsequent arrangement. If he was liable to be called upon to receive or make actual delivery then, in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary a similar liability rested on the defendant himself whatever might have been the defendant's own intentions. As the contracts between the plaintiff and the third parties were not void, so the contracts between the defendant and the plaintiff to indemnify the plaintiff in respect of these contracts were also valid. The mere fact that the plaintiff knowing the defendant's position and means, must have inferred that he did not mean or intend to perform the contracts in specie was not, per se without more sufficient to render the contracts invalid and not binding on the defendant. The inference of the plaintiff would not be, per se a binding agreement. PEROSHA CURSETJI v. MANEKJI DOSSABHOY I. L. R., 22 Bom., 899

88 ——————— Sutta transactions—Suit to recover brokerage in respect of sutta transactions—Bombay Act III of 1865—Plaintiff was employed by defendants to enter into cotton transactions on their behalf at Dholera. The contracts for the sale and purchase of cotton were made on terms contained in a printed form which incorporated the rules framed by the cotton merchants of Dholera. These rules expressly provided for the delivery of cotton in every case and forbade all gambling in differences In spite of these rules and the express terms of the contracts, the course of dealings was such that none of the contracts were ever completed except by payment of differences between the contract price and the market price in Bombay on the Vaida day The plaintiff entered into numerous transactions of this kind on the defendants behalf He now sued to recover from them the balance due to him on account of brokerage commission and losses incurred in the said transactions Held that the transactions were a mere gambling for differences, and no suit would lie under Bombay Act III of 1865 to recover any of the items connected with such transactions In order to determine whether a contract is a wagering contract the Court will not only look at the terms of the written contract but also probe among the surrounding circumstances to find out the true intentions of the parties Universal Stock Exchange v Strachan L R 1896 Ap Ca. 166 and In re Gieve L R 1899 1 Q B 794 followed DOSHI TALAKSHI v UJAMSI VELSI [I. the plaintiff contracted to purchase from the defendant the right to receive the dividend on 50 shares of the Empress Mill at R37 per share the plaintiff being under an impression that the dividend was to be declared on some subsequent day The plaintiff deposited R100 with the defendant as part payment of the purchase-money Subsequently it was ascertained that the dividend had been already declared on 17th January 1883 (i.e. four days before the contract) at R25 The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant to have the contract declared cancelled and sought to recover the deposit of R100 with interest The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a sutta or wagering contract rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction to set aside the lower Court s decision. Held that, in the first instance the plaint as framed not disclosing any cause of action ought to have been returned for amendment It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract or should have contained an allegation of fraud on the defendant s part inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact would not under s. 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) have made the contract voidable Held also that if the contract was really a wager the deposit could not be recovered under s. 65 of the Contract Act as its nature must from the first have been known to the parties. To an agreement so known to be void s 65 does not apply If the contract was in the intention of both parties a wager the suit would be barred by s 1 of Bombay Act III of 1865 which though it formed a part of Act XXI of 1848 which is repealed by the Contract Act is not being a special Act applicable to the Bombay Presidency itself repealed It must be read with s 30 of the Contract Act. Held also that to constitute a wager the transaction between the parties must wholly depend on the risk in contemplation and "neither party must look to anything but the payment of money on the determination of an uncertainty" But if one of the parties has the event in his own hands the transaction is not a wager If the plaintiff's real contention was that defendant was aware of a declaration of dividends at R25 per share and by keeping plaintiff in ignorance of the facts induced him to enter into a wagering agreement for payment of differences at a contract rate of R37 per share then to a suit for the recovery of the deposit made to the defendant with reference to such an agreement, Bombay Act III of 186. has no application. It did not appear that the goods had been identified in any way by the purchasers who had merely seen a sample. 94. ——— Signature—Repudiation—Statute of frauds—The plaintiffs contracted with the defendant for the purchase from him of a certain quantity of hog's lard. The terms of the contract were contained in a letter which was drafted by the plaintiffs and sent to the defendant for signature. The defendant returned the letter unsigned, with two additional clauses. The plaintiffs not being able to agree to one of these clauses had an interview with the defendant when the defendant took the document away with him and subsequently on 17th May returned it signed but with the additional clauses still remaining. The plaintiffs had another interview with the defendant on 5th June during which the additional clause objected to by the plaintiffs was struck out one of the plaintiffs writing the word cancelled against that clause and the defendant putting his initials against the word "cancelled. The plaintiffs then added to the contract the words approved together with R and C being the initials of their firm. Other alterations had been made in the document and it containing many erasures the plaintiffs on the same day sent a fair copy to the defendant for signature but the defendant wrote repudiating the alleged contract and refusing to sign the document. Held (confirming the decision of the Court below) there was no binding contract between the parties. The signature of the defendant put to the document on 17th May was not a sufficient signature by the party to be charged so as to satisfy the statute of frauds. CHARRIOL v SHIRCORE 8 B L R 305

106 ———— Alteration in material part—Effect of alteration as vitiating document—Vesting of interest by execution of mortgage instrument —By an agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendants' predecessors in title plaintiff undertook to sell and convey certain lands to the purchasers and to allow half the purchase money to remain at interest for three years on security of the lands sold. Plaintiff's mother was alive as also his son who was then a minor In order to protect the purchasers from any claims by the said mother or son as against the lands so agreed to be sold plaintiff further agreed to give the purchasers a bond indemnifying them from any such or other claims. Plaintiff in pursuance of the said agreement, duly executed a conveyance of the lands; he also gave the purchasers an indemnity in respect of claims by his mother as against the lands. The purchasers executed a mortgage over the lands in plaintiff's favour in which the indemnity to be furnished by plaintiff was at first referred to in general terms but the document concluded with the words, a security should be furnished for this sum on account of the minor only The balance of purchase money so secured not having been paid plaintiff brought a suit for the sale of the mortgaged land and before doing so tendered an indemnity protecting the defendants against any claims that might be made as against the lands by the plaintiff's said minor son It was found that the words for the minor only had been added to the mortgage instrument after its execution On its being contended that the alteration was a material one and vitiated the document and that the suit being based on the altered document must fail and that the tender of a general guarantee as originally agreed upon was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue —Held per COLLINS, C J and BENSON J (in an order calling for a finding as to whether the alteration had been made with the mortgagor's consent) that the mortgage instrument having provided for security to be given by plaintiff in general terms the addition of the words for the minor only restricted the liability of the property to be given by plaintiff as security to claims made by the said minor son. It diminished the guarantee to be given by plaintiff against claims by the mother or others It was thus an alteration in a material part of the document and would vitiate it as a basis for the plaintiff's suit unless the plaintiff could show that the alteration had been made with the consent of the mortgagors who executed the document. The finding of the lower Court was that the alteration had been made without the mortgagor's consent. Held SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, Offg C.J and MOORE J (O FARRELL, J dissenting) that on the execution of the mortgage instrument any interest in the property comprised therein at once became vested in the plaintiff that such interest was not and could not have been divested from him by the subsequent addition of the words referred to, and that in asking for the sale of the land plaintiff was seeking to enforce not a right resting on the contract or covenant but one arising by operation of law with reference to the vested interest created by the instrument having been executed, that though reference was made in the plaint to the provisions relating to the mortgage instrument in its altered state such reference was not an essential part of plaintiff's cause of action and that the suit was not necessarily based on the altered instrument that the execution of a security bond in terms of the mortgage instrument before it was altered was not a condition precedent and the suit was sustainable though no such security had been given before the institution of the suit and that (the question of damages not arising) plaintiff was entitled to a decree on the mortgage instrument which would also provide that he must furnish a proper security bond before an order absolute would be passed Per O FARRELL, J —That inasmuch as the suit was based not on the transferred right but on the altered document and as no obligation had as yet attached under the unaltered document the suit should be dismissed that the defendants' liability was contingent upon the prior execution by plaintiff of a general guarantee and not of the limited one which he relying on the fraudulent alteration had tendered that where an agreement has as to one of the parties been wholly executed, the altered contract may be given in evidence of the correlative obligations incurred by the other party but that here the agreement so far as it related to repayment of the purchase money was executory and contingent upon the fulfilment by the plaintiff of the prior obligation to execute a proper guarantee and that a conditional decree upon a proper security bond being executed could not be given SUBRAHMANIA AYYAN v KRISHNA AYYAN [I. 129 —————— Voluntary transfer—Act IX of 1872 (Contract Act) s 16 —In a transaction between two persons where one is so situated as to be under the control and influence of the other the Courts in this country have to see that such other does not unduly and unfairly exercise that influence and control over such person for his own advantage or benefit or for the advantage or benefit of some religious object in which he is interested and will call upon him to give clear and cogent proof that the transaction complained of was such a one as the law would support and recognize Where a fiduciary or quasi fiduciary relation had existed Courts of Equity have invariably placed the burden of sustaining the transaction upon the party benefited by it requiring him to show that it was of an unobjectionable character and one which it ought not to disturb The exercise of this beneficial jurisdiction is not confined to cases only between guardian and ward attorney and client father and son but the relief thus granted stands upon a general principle applying to all the variety of relations in which dominion may be exercised by one person over another The plaintiff who on the death of the widow of his brother became entitled to the estate of the deceased found himself resisted in his claim by wealthy relatives. He was a man without means The defendant took him to his house kept him there found him all the money for the purpose of carrying on his litigation with his relatives, in which the plaintiff succeeded While the litigation for mutation of names in respect of the property was pending in the Revenue Court and while plaintiff was residing with the defendant he executed the sale deed in favour of defendant's brother for the nominal consideration of R9 500 or half the property he claimed and again shortly after the mutation case had terminated in his favour he executed a deed of endowment of the remaining half in favour of a temple founded by the ancestor of the defendant and in which the defendant was interested, and the result was that plaintiff was left as poor as he was when he first came into the defendant's hands Plaintiff sued for cancellation of the deed of endowment on the ground that the same had been obtained from him by the exercise of undue influence and by means of fraud and obtained a decree On appeal by the defendant it was held that looking at all the facts such a relation between plaintiff and defendant in the course of the year 1885 had been established as to cast upon the latter the obligation of satisfying the Court that the transaction which was given effect to by the deed of endowment was an honest bona fide transaction

131. ———— Oppressive conditions in deed—Inadequacy of consideration—Where money lenders dealing with ignorant illiterate peasants made use of the necessitous position of these peasants who were seeking to raise a sum of money for the purpose of stocking and tilling their lands to impose upon them a contract in the form of a mortgage by which they agreed in default of punctual payment of the half produce and other events to sell their land at a gross undervalue, viz., one third of the amount of the mortgage debt which in itself was not more than equal to half the value of the annual produce of the land and to remain liable to the remaining two thirds of that debt with interest and even if no default should occur on their parts in payment of a moiety of the annual produce or the performance of their other covenants and notwithstanding full payment of the principal to continue for fifteen years to pay the half produce of the lands to the mortgagees—Held (reversing the decrees of both the Courts below) that the deed of mortgage should only stand as security for the payment of the principal sum of R300 and interest at 9 per cent and in all other respects should be set aside as inequitable fraudulent and grossly oppressive. Held also that if in execution of the reversed decrees the lands had been made over to the mortgagees as purchasers they should be restored to the mortgagors and that the rents profits and produce received by the mortgagees while in possession should be set off on account against the said principal sum and interest and that the balance should be paid by the party against whom the same might be found. Mere inadequacy of consideration unless it be so great as to amount to evidence of fraud is not sufficient ground for setting aside a contract or refusing to decree specific performance of it. But inadequacy of consideration when found in conjunction with any such other circumstances as suppression of true value of property misrepresentation fraud surprise oppression urgent necessity for money weakness of understanding or even ignorance is an ingredient which weighs powerfully with a Court of Equity in considering whether it should set aside contracts or refuse to decree specific performance of them. 138 ——— Contract to pay expenses of litigation—The result of the English cases regarding hard or unconscionable bargains is that in dealings with expectant heirs reversioners or remaindermen the fact that the bargain was declined by others as not being sufficiently advantageous does not raise a presumption that it was fair and reasonable and that until the contrary is satisfactorily proved by the party trying to maintain the bargain, the Court may presume that a bargain which apparently provides in the opinion of the Court for an unusually high return or for an exceptionally high rate of interest is a hard and unconscionable bargain against which relief should be granted. The doctrine of equity on the subject of such bargains is applicable in England only to dealings with expectant heirs reversioners or remaindermen. The judgment of the Privy Council in Kamini Sundari Chaodhrani v Kali Prosunno Ghose I L R 12 Calc 225 L R 12 I A 215 does not imply that the doctrine is to be applied in India to cases except where it would have been applied in England or except where the case is in some way analogous to a case of snatching a bargain with an expectant heir reversioner or remainderman or except there is some fiduciary relationship between the lender and the borrower although there may be no fraud or undue influence or except there is some incapacity such as ignorance on the part of the borrower to appreciate the true effect of his bargain For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court the appellant on the advice of his legal advisers executed a bond for R25,000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses The obligor agreed to pay the R25,000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in

The Privy Council decreed his appeal and he obtained possession of the property in suit but declined to pay the R25,000 upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time he was without even the means of subsistence that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been allowed to him that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests that there was nothing to show that having regard to the risks of the litigation he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application Held that although there was nothing to show that the obligor could have obtained an advance on terms more advantageous to himself it was for the obligee to establish to the Court's satisfaction without reasonable doubt that he could not have done so and that this not having been established and the reasonableness and fairness of the bargain not being proved by showing that there had been difficulties in negotiating it or that others had refused it as not sufficiently advantageous to them the Court should hold the bargain to be a hard and unconscionable one which should not be enforced. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the R3,700 actually advanced with simple interest at 20 per cent per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree with costs in proportion and interest at 6 per cent per annum on the R3,700 interest and costs from the date of the decree until payment CHUNNI KUAR v. RUP SINGH

The plaintiff experienced considerable difficulty in procuring the means of appeal. 143 ——— Contract for sale of seed—Excess refraction—A contract for the sale of seed contained the following provision —

Refraction guaranteed at four per cent with usual allowance up to six per cent exceeding which the seller is to reclean the seed at his expense within a week failing which buyers to have the option of cancelling that portion of the contract tendered or of buying against the seller or of taking the parcel as it stands with usual allowance for excess refraction Delivery from seller's godown in pile up to the 15th of July next On the 10th July the vendor tendered the seed. On examination the refraction was found to be above the contract rate It was agreed that the vendor should reclean the seed and on the 15th July the purchasers went to take delivery of the seed which was found still to be not sufficiently cleaned On the 15th July the vendor said that he should require a week longer for that purpose The purchasers then cancelled the contract. In a suit by the vendor for damages for breach of contract,—Held (1) that the breach of the contract was with the plaintiff (2) that the week allowed for recleaning commenced from the 10th July; and that as the plaintiff had not succeeded in reducing the rate of refraction to the contract rate the defendants had a right to reject the seed; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to further time to reclean it again. 144 ——— Agreement to deliver goods at specified place—Tender of goods—Right to rescind contract—If a person contracts to deliver goods at a specified place he must be there in person or by agent and be ready to deliver them if to deliver them by a certain time he must tender them so as to allow sufficient time for examination and receipt But when a thing is to be performed at a certain place on or before a certain day to another party to a contract the tender must be to the other party at that place and that other party must be present at some particular part of the day before sunset so that the act may be completed by daylight. Where a thing is to be done anywhere a tender at a convenient time before midnight is sufficient. In case of violation of a contract by one party the other party may ordinarily rescind it totally or partially provided he himself is guilty of no default or violation and exercises the right within a reasonable time If after default of the other party he does an act recognizing the contract he cannot afterwards rescind it. hundred full pressed bales fully good fair Kishli cotton at R208 8 per candy to be delivered from March 15th to April 1st On March 21st the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter reminding him of the contract and requesting him to take delivery On receipt of this letter the defendant put the matter into the hands of V The plaintiff had then no cotton of the specific kind to deliver nor did the letter refer to any particular bales At 11 30 o'clock A M on March 30th, the plaintiffs sent the defendant a letter enclosing a sampling order directed to an employe of Messrs H and S on whose premises the bales referred to in the order were lying V on behalf of the defendant got samples taken of the cotton and examined them but without reference on that day to any standard. He then however conceived doubts as to the quality of the cotton and expressed his doubts to the plaintiff in the evening of that day On 31st March the plaintiffs sent the defendant a delivery order enclosed in a letter from their solicitors calling on the defendant to attend with his surveyor at 1 P.M on that day to survey the cotton as otherwise an ex parte survey would be held. This letter reached the defendant at 11 30 o'clock A.M. and was given by him to V at noon of the same day V applied to M to attend as surveyor but M was unable to do so. The plaintiffs had an ex parte survey held by Messrs C and B at 1 P M and they pronounced the cotton samples of which were submitted to them to be fully good fair Kishli cotton. While this survey was going on the defendant was on the Cotton Green but declined to attend saying that V and his surveyor were coming Shortly afterwards V did come and subsequently wrote a letter to plaintiffs in the defendant s name stating that the cotton was not of the description contracted to be sold by them and asking for a survey This letter reached the plaintiffs at 2 10 o'clock P M After this there was a discussion between plaintiffs and defendant and V On that afternoon (the 31st March) the plaintiffs solicitors sent a letter to the defendant stating the result of the survey and requiring him to take delivery This was answered by a letter of next day (April 1st) from the defendant s solicitors denying that the cotton was of proper quality or that proper notice of the survey had been given alleging that the defendant had that morning attended with his surveyor and asked leave to survey the cotton which had been refused and stating that the contract must be treated as cancelled. The cotton was sold by auction on April 5th The plaintiffs brought this suit to recover R1 631 1 11 as damages for non acceptance of the cotton The defendant contended that there had been no reasonable time allowed by the plaintiffs for the examination of the cotton and that a joint survey should have been held. Held that a joint survey was not necessary under the terms of s 38 of the Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872) and that the defendant having had a period of twenty four hours for inspection had had a reasonable opportunity of seeing whether the cotton offered by the plaintiffs was such cotton as the plaintiffs were bound by their contract to deliver A purchaser of goods is not entitled to continue inspecting and examining the goods offered by the vendor until the expiration of the period for delivery A reasonable opportunity for such inspection and examination is all that he is entitled to PURTONSEY MORARJI v JAMNADAS PITAMBERDAS

One of the conditions was that plaintiff should not sublet the tolls without the permission of the Collector previously obtained. One of the clauses of the lease provided that for a breach of any of the conditions of the lease the Collector might impose a fine of rupees two hundred. The plaintiff sublet the tolls to the defendants without the permission of the Collector and sued to recover a certain amount which the defendants promised to pay for the sublease. The defendants contended that the contravention of the condition of the lease was illegal and opposed to public policy, that therefore the contract was void under s 23 of the Contract Act and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the amount. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed. default should be made execution should proceed and no objection on the ground that the decree was more than two years old should be made by the debtors. The terms of the arrangement were embodied in a petition and sanctioned by the Court which thereupon struck off the case. The debtors having made default on the 13th September 1881 the decree-holders applied for execution but A who had not agreed to the arrangement objected that the application was barred under s. 230 of the Civil Procedure Code and the objection was held to be valid. The decree-holders then sued to recover the money for which execution had been taken out basing their suit upon the arrangement made by the defendants on the 10th February 1881. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed on proof that there was a contract between the parties in good consideration and that the petition of 10th February 1881 though not a contract giving the plaintiffs a right of suit might be regarded as evidence corroborating other evidence of such a contract. In September 1869 before the decree had been executed the judgment-debtor admitting that a certain amount was due under the decree agreed to pay such amount by instalments; and that if default were made the decree should be executed for the whole amount thereof. Default having been made early in 1873 the decree-holder applied at once for execution of the decree. On the 5th May 1873 a petition signed by the judgment-debtor was preferred on his behalf to the Court executing the decree, such petition being in effect as follows: "Execution case for R6,839-15-3. In this case the decree-holder has filed an application for execution of his decree in consequence of a default in payment of instalments; the fact is that the petitioner has failed to pay the instalments simply owing to illness, otherwise he has no objection to the decree-holder's demand; in future he will not fail to pay instalments; he has written a letter to plaintiff asking him to pardon his breach of promise and to agree to realize the decree-money by the instalments formerly fixed and to stay execution of the decree for the present. The decree-holder has granted this request; the petitioner therefore presents this petition and prays that monthly instalments of R150 may be fixed and execution of the decree be postponed for the present; in case of default being made in payment of two instalments in succession the decree-holder will be at liberty to realize the balance of the decree-money with interest at twelve per cent. per annum." 10 ——— Partial restraint of trade—S 27 of the Contract Act does away with the distinction observed in the English cases between partial and total restraint of trade and makes all contracts falling within its terms void unless they fall within its exceptions. The section was intended to prevent a partial as well as a total restraint of trade A and B two ghat serangs entered into a contract with X and five others who carried on the business of dubashes at Chittagong, for the purpose of carrying on their respective businesses in unanimity and not injuring one another's trade The contract which was to last for three years provided inter alia that A and B were to act as ghat serangs only and do no service to ships in any other capacity that X and the other dubashes were to give A five vessels secured by them every year for him to act as ghat serang and that A was only to act as ghat serang to the said five ships, and with the exception of ships for which he had previously acted as ghat serang he should not act as ghat serang or do any other services for ships belonging to any one else The contract also contained provisions as to the apportionment of the five ships so to be given to A amongst the various dubashes, and amongst such an agreement by X to give A the third ship he should secure It also contained a provision for the payment of R1,000 as damages by any one breaking the contract to the person who should suffer by the breach. In a suit by A against X alleging a breach of the contract by the latter in not giving him the third ship as agreed, and claiming R1,000 by way of damages, X pleaded that the contract was void under s. 27 of the Contract Act as being in restraint of trade Held that the contention was sound and that the suit must be dismissed.

The consideration for the promise by Y to give the ships to A was the agreement by A not to carry on any other business than that of a ghat serang and that only in respect of his old ships and the five agreed to be so furnished to him by the dubashes. The effect of this agreement was absolutely to restrain A from carrying on the business of a dubash and to create a partial restraint on his power to carry on the business of a ghat serang and whether or not (even had the latter stipulation not been illegal) the contract would have been void under the provisions of s. 24 of the Act by reason of part of the consideration being the undertaking by A absolutely to refrain from carrying on the business of a dubash it was void for both reasons under the provisions of s. 27 and A was not entitled to recover any damages under it. The agreement was to be in force for a period of five years. The agreement was to be in force for four years. The other parties had carried out the agreement but the defendant although he had carried the R. to a separate account, refused to pay the plaintiff his share of the amount. He also refused to pay the other two parties their shares. The accounts had been duly made up showing the sums which the defendant under the agreement had to pay both to the plaintiff and the two other parties to the agreement. The plaintiff sued the defendant for his share. The defendant contended that the agreement was in restraint of trade and was therefore not enforceable. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover his share from the defendant. 1. ———— Right to rescind—Refusal to perform—Time of essence of contract—Suit for damages for non delivery—S 39 of the Contract Act only enacts what was the law in England and in India before the Act was passed—viz that where a party to contract refuses altogether to perform or is disabled from performing his part of it the other party has a right to rescind In a suit for damages for the non delivery of linseed upon a contract the terms of which as to payment were cash on delivery part delivery had been made by the defendants and a sum of R1 000 had been paid on account by the plaintiffs The plaintiffs then made a claim against the defendants for excess refraction and the defendants thereupon refused to deliver the remainder of the linseed unless the plaintiffs paid the full amount owing for the portion that had been delivered. The plaintiffs declined to accept these terms and the defendants then cancelled the contract Held that there was not such a refusal on the part of the plaintiffs to perform their part of the contract as to entitle the defendants to rescind under s 39 of the Contract Act SOOLTAN CHAND v SCHILLER

In the absence of proof, that a term providing that the pilgrims should be free from small pox was to be implied by the usage of the pilgrim carrying trade there could be no reason for implying it The possibility that some of the 500 pilgrims might have the germs of the disease in them owing to their exposure to infection might make carrying them more expensive and onerous but it was a contingency which from the very nature of the trade must have been known to the defendants and if they wished to provide against it they should have done so by express terms. Held also that the performance of the contract had not become unlawful The risk of disease was not greater than would necessarily be incurred in every crowded emigrant ship But even if special precautions were desirable under the circumstance it was for the defendants who had entered into an absolute agreement to have taken them BOMBAY AND PERSIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v PURATTINO COMPANY

Act III of 1869 s 8—Suit to recover cess fraudulently levied*—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869 s 8. The defendant contended that in consequence of a demand from Government he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated and was therefore entitled under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held that the defendant was not a person interested in the payment of the money made by him to Government within the meaning of s 69 of the Contract Act assuming that a portion of that sum was demanded by Government in respect of the plaintiffs' wanta lands and that they were bound by law to pay it to Government. Held further that the defendant did not lawfully make the payment within the meaning of s 70 of the Act inasmuch as he did so fraudulently and dishonestly. Act VII of 1863 ss 2 6 9—Inamdar—Suit for contribution*—The plaintiff was the jaghirdar of a village in which the defendant held certain land as inamdar on the annual payment of a certain quit rent. The plaintiff's jaghir was in point of time subsequent to the defendant's inam. Ever since the time of the jaghir the ancestors of the defendant (and after them the defendant himself) paid the quit-rent to the ancestors of the plaintiff and after them to the plaintiff himself. In 1869 the summary settlement was introduced into the village under Bombay Act VII of 1863. Under s 9 of that Act a notice was served upon the plaintiff by the Collector in respect of the village and he accepted the settlement provided in ss 2 and 6 of the Act. Government, accordingly granted the village to him at the summary settlement of two annas in the rupee of the full assessment. No notice was served upon the defendant under the Act nor did the plaintiff inform the defendant of the notice which the plaintiff had received in respect of the village. The certificate issued by the Collector to the plaintiff previously to the grant of the sanad regarding the settlement contained the following passage — Before the villages (Vesu and Sanya) were granted in jaghir lands were held by peta inamdars over which the jaghirdar has no right. They are entered in the sanad only for the purpose of receiving the settlement and paying it over to the Sarkar. In 1877 the plaintiff sued the defendant for the amount of three years summary settlement which he (plaintiff) had paid to Government on account of the defendant's land. Held that ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) did not apply to the case. No fresh kabuliat was executed on expiry of the term and the plaintiff a part proprietor collecting rent separately brought this suit for arrears of rent at the new rate of R4. The defendant objected inter alia that the plaintiff being a part proprietor, was not entitled to sue for enhanced rent and that the stipulation for the higher rate was a mere threat and not intended to be carried out. The first Court gave a decree at an enhanced rate or an addition of two annas in the rupee in terms of s. 29 (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act On appeal the Subordinate Judge dismissed the whole suit on the ground that the suit being one for enhanced rent and the plaintiff a part proprietor the suit did not lie Held that, the kabuliat having been executed before the Bengal Tenancy Act was passed, the present case did not come within the operation of that Act and the plaintiff although a part proprietor could bring this suit Ram Chunder Chackrabutty v Giridhur Dutt I L R 19 Calc 755 followed. Held by PRINSEP and GHOSE JJ (RAMPINI J dissenting)—That the additional rent was intended to be enforceable only on default to execute a fresh kabuliat and the so-called agreement to pay at the enhanced rate of R4 was in the nature of a penalty Held by RAMPINI J—The plea that the rate of R4 was a penalty was not taken by the defendant in his written statement, and in any case the stipulation did not come within the purview of s 74 of the Indian Contract Act and the suit was not for compensation for breach of contract but for rent at a rate which the defendant has agreed to pay from a certain time Held also, that s. 29 (d) of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no retrospective effect and does not apply to the present kabuliat which was executed before the passing of that Act. 1 CO SHARERS LIABILITY OF

1 ———— Liability under decree for costs—Division of liability—A suit having been brought before a Subordinate Judge against co sharers in a joint property for contribution on account of costs levied from plaintiffs in a suit which had been preferred by all the co-sharers (plaintiffs and defendants) together a decree was given ordering the defendants to contribute per capita in equal shares. On application made to the Subordinate Judge's successor a review was granted and additional evidence called for as to the respective shares of the parties in the property Held that the parties were liable for contribution according to their respective interests in the property and not simply per capita MURDAN ALI v TUFUZZUL HOSSEIN 16 W R., 78

2 ———— Allegation and proof of specific liability—In a suit for contribution where a joint decree cannot be passed the specific liability of each co-sharer must be not only alleged but clearly established PITAMBUR CHUCKERBUTTY v BHYRUB NATH PALEET 15 W R., 53

3 ———— Unequal distribution in execution of decree—Proportionate liability— In execution of a decree for an enhanced rent against the holders of a jote jumma, the landlord put up for sale and caused to be sold a talukh which was also the joint property of the same parties One of these parties accordingly sued others of them on the allegation that his share of the property sold exceeded the lands occupied by him in the jote jumma, and asked the Court to give him a joint and several decree against all the defendants for the entire amount of the difference Held that plaintiff could not be entitled to such a decree but should have asked that the defendants might be directed to contribute to him in proportion to their respective shares if his complaint was well founded. But as defendants alleged that although plaintiff held that small quantity it was compensated for in other ways it was for plaintiff to show that he did not derive from or by virtue of his share in the jote jumma a profit or increase

In special appeal it was contended inter alia that the principle of the decree was wrong and that the defendants were liable only for that portion of the land of which they were in wrongful possession Held that as in the original suit there was no plea that the lands were in the occupation of the answering defendants in any other way than under their zamindari title the only way in which the habilities could be awarded was by making each party pay according to the shares they held in the parent zamindari OBHOY KANT LAHOREE v RAM SOONDUREE DABEE CHOWDHRANI 20 W R 209

8 ——— Rent suit against recorded tenants—Co-owners liability of in a suit for contribution—All the co owners of a taluk are jointly liable for the rent during the period over which their ownership extends and although the landlord sues only the recorded tenants for the rent this would not relieve the unrecorded tenants from the equitable liability of paying their share of the rent to those of the recorded tenants who are obliged to pay the whole The fact that one of the co-owners (whose name is not recorded and who is not a party to the suit for rent) sold away his interest before the date of the suit he having been a co-owner at the time the liability arose would not relieve him of the liability although he may not have derived any advantage from the payment made GOBINDO CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v BASANT KUMAR CHUCKERBUTTY 3 C W N 384

18 ———— Ground for setting aside conviction—Police Act V of 1861 s 29—Offence under Penal Code —That the facts proved would also constitute an offence under a section of the Penal Code seems to be no reason for quashing a conviction under the special law Act V of 1861 QUEEN v KASSIMUDDIN 8 W R Cr 55

19 ———— Subsequent evidence —A valid conviction arrived at by a Magistrate who had jurisdiction in the matter cannot be set aside simply because subsequent to the trial and conviction fresh evidence has been discovered which may tend to convict the accused of an offence other than that for which he was convicted. 23 ———— Dispute between civil suitors—Improper prosecution—Illegal conviction.—As a general rule one of two parties to an impending suit ought not to put the Criminal Law in motion as against the other in matters connected with the suit or if he does so the hearing of the criminal case ought to be postponed until the suit is concluded But although that is a good ground for questioning the propriety of a prosecution it is not a ground for questioning the legality of a conviction QUEEN v ACHEET LALL 17 W R. Cr 46

24. ———— Irregularity in criminal proceedings—Prejudging defence—Upon the single charge of wrongful confinement preferred under s 342 of the Penal Code before a Joint Magistrate the prisoners raised a defence justifying the confinement on the ground that the persons confined had been caught by them under circumstances which led to the belief that they had committed house breaking by night with intent to commit theft. Enquiry having been made the Magistrate committed the prisoner not only for wrongful confinement, but disbelieving the defence for fabricating false evidence and for bringing a false charge The prisoners were tried by the Sessions Judge and found guilty on all three charges at one and the same time Held that the conviction on the last two charges was illegal as by adding the additional charges the Magistrate had really prejudged the defence to the first charge Where the Court without having first heard the evidence for the prosecution examines the witnesses for the defence he commits an irregularity but if the prisoners are not materially prejudiced thereby the conviction will not be set aside IN THE MATTER OF TURIBULLAH 4 C L R. 338

(ii) That no Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit and no Court of revenue had jurisdiction to make a decree for sale of the immoveable property or a decree in execution of which the immoveable property could be sold to the prejudice of incumbrances to which it was subject (iii) That it was not the intention of the Legislature that a Civil Court should have jurisdiction to invest by declaration or otherwise a decree of a Court of revenue with the attributes of a decree for sale such as could be passed by a Civil Court in a suit for sale under the Transfer of Property Act 1882 (iv) That there is no general principle of equity to the effect that whoever having an interest in an estate makes a payment in order to save the estate obtains a charge on the estate and therefore in the absence of a statutory enactment a co sharer who paid the whole revenue and thus saved the estate does not by reason of such payment acquire a charge on the share of his defaulting co-sharer Kinu Ram Das v Mozaffer Hosain Shaha I L R 14 Calc 809 approved. (v) That the principle of Maritime Civil Salvage had no application to the case and that no analogy could exist between the case of a salvor in Maritime Civil Salvage and the case of a co sharer in a mehal to whom s. 146 or s 148 of the North Western Provinces Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) applied. Leslie v French L R 23 Ch D 552 and Falcke v Scottish Imperial Insurance Company L R 34 Ch D 34 referred to SETH CHITOR MAL v SHIB LAL [I. 22. ——— Limitation Act 1877 arts 99 and 132—Suit to recover assessment paid by a co owner of property from other co owners—In 1868 the uncle of the plaintiff brought a suit (No 176 of 1868) against five members of the undivided family to which the defendants in the present suit belonged and obtained a money decree In execution of that decree he attached and sold certain land in which all the members of the defendants' family were interested At the sale he purchased the land himself and was put into possession In 1873 he began to pay the assessment upon the whole property Subsequent litigation took place between him and the defendants family pending which the plaintiff separated from his uncle and obtained the property in question as his share The result of that litigation was a decree by the High Court on the 23rd September 1879 declaring that the plaintiff s uncle was only entitled to the interest of the five members of the family who had been defendants in his suit (No 176 of 1868) in execution of the decree in which the property had been sold The plaintiff brought the present suit in 1883 against the other members of the family to recover their proportionate share of the assessment for the years 1875—1878 during which period he had paid the whole assessment He prayed for a sale of their interest in the land. Both the lower Courts held that the payment of assessment did not create a charge on the property and that the plaintiff having omitted to sue within three years from the date of the payment made by him the present suit was barred. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court —Held confirming the lower Court s decree that the suit was barred. The plaintiff paid the assessment as full owner of the property and it was entirely by his own action that the defendants had been excluded from the property and did not pay their quotas of the assessment Under those circumstances the payments could be regarded as salvage payments so as to make them a charge according to equity justice and good conscience upon the shares of the other co-owners ACHUT RAMCHANDRA PAL v HARI KAMTI I. Joint property being used consistently with the continuance of the joint ownership and possession without exclusion of the co sharers who do not join in the work there is no encroachment on the rights of any of them as regards common enjoyment so as to give ground for a suit The defendant a co sharer in village lands without claiming to restrain competition acted upon the right that a ferry may be established in India by a person on his own property taking toll from strangers and that he may acquire such a right by grant or user over the property of others whether a co sharer with them or not He used property that he owned jointly with the plaintiffs his co-sharers excluding none of them As no grant was ever made to him he could only have set up an exclusive right by showing that he had either dispossessed them or had had adverse possession for twelve years or that he had used the ferry for twelve years as of right The question however of any exclusive right in the defendant had not arisen For the parties being co owners the defendant had made use of the joint property in a way quite consistent with the continuance of the joint ownership and joint possession Watson & Co v Ramchand Dutt I L R 18 Calc 10 L R 17 I A 110 distinguished in regard to the exclusion of co sharers which there took place and referred to as to caution to be exercised by Courts in interfering with the enjoyment of joint estates as between their co owners LACHMESWAR SINGH v MANOWAR HOSSAIN [I L R 19 Calc 253 L R 19 I A 48

168 ———— Co sharers Suit by one of several for separate share of rent or in alternative for whole rent due if more than share claimed should be found due—Parties—The plaintiffs, some of the co sharers in certain lands instituted a suit against a tenant and the remaining co sharer P alleging that the tenant held under a pottah granted by all the co sharers that rent was due from him for the period in suit and that they had ascertained from P that he alleged that he had received his share of the rent for that period from the tenant and that he refused to join as plaintiff in the suit They accordingly prayed (a) for a decree for the amount of their share of the rent against the tenant (b) if it should appear that any part of P's share of the rent remained unpaid the requisite extra Court fee might be received and a decree made for whole of the arrears in favour of themselves and P and that the latter might if he consented be made a co-plaintiff (c) that if it appeared that P had realized more than his share of the rent a decree might be made against him for the excess and against the tenant for the balance The plaint also asked for costs and further relief The tenant contested the suit and submitted that it was in effect a suit for plaintiffs share of the rent only and could not therefore be maintained. He further pleaded that the plaintiffs and P were members of a joint Hindu family of which P was the manager and that under arrangement with the latter he had applied the rent due under the pottah towards the liquidation of debts due under bonds in P's name but for which the joint family were liable The first Court dismissed the suit on the preliminary issue that it was in substance a suit for a specific share of the rent by some only of the co sharers and that there being no agreement by the tenant to pay the co sharers their respective shares of the rent separately such a suit would not lie Held (upholding the order of the lower Appellate Court) that the order of the first Court was wrong The suit as framed, was necessarily a suit in the alternative and as the plaintiffs were necessarily not aware whether any portion of P's share of the rent was due or not but believing that none was due they could only claim their share asking to have the plaint amended so as to include the whole rent due if it should appear that anything was due to P and thus bring the suit within the rule that in the absence of special agreement between a tenant and co sharers to pay their rateable proportion of the rent a suit by one of the co sharers must be for the entire rent due making his co sharers defendants if they refuse to join as plaintiffs. The prayer of the plaint fully provided for this and the suit should have been tried on its merits and the plaint amended if the facts proved showed that any rent remained unpaid and due to P as asked for by the plaintiffs PERGASH LAL v AKHOWRI BALGOBIND SAHOY [I L R., 19 Calc., 735

48. ———— Error or mistake—Proceedings initiated through error of Courts.—On the 14th February 1884 the High Court dismissed an application of the 22nd March 1883 by a purdanashin lady for leave to appeal in formâ pauperis from a decree dated the 16th September 1882, the application, after giving credit for 86 days spent in obtaining the necessary papers, being out of time by 73 days. On the 16th August 1884 an order was passed allowing an application which had been made for review of the previous order to stand over pending the decision of a connected case. On the 24th April 1885 the connected case having then been decided, the application for review was heard and dismissed. Nothing more was done by the appellant until the 18th June 1885, when on her application an order was passed by a single Judge allowing her, under s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), to file an appeal on full stamp paper; and she thereupon, having borrowed money on onerous conditions to defray the necessary institution fees, presented her appeal, which was admitted provisionally by a single Judge. Held by MAHMOOD, J., that the ex parte order of the 18th June 1885 was one which the Civil Procedure Code nowhere allowed and was ultra vires, and that the bench before which the appeal came for hearing was competent to determine whether the order admitting the appeal should stand or be set aside. Dulez Sahai v. Ganeshi Lal, I. L. R., 1 All. 34, referred to. Held further by MAHMOOD, J., that although but for the erroneous order of the 18th June 1885 the appellant would neither have borrowed the money required to defray the institution fees nor preferred the appeal, and this was a circumstance to be considered in the exercise of the discretionary power conferred by s. 220 of the Code, it could not be said that the error of a Court of justice which leads a party to initiate proceedings against another is sufficient to exonerate the losing party from paying the costs incurred by the opposite party, and that the appeal should therefore be dismissed with costs. It therefore ordered that the defendant should pay all the plain tiffs costs up to the date at which the R200 were paid into Court and as to their subsequent costs that the defendant should pay three fourths of the plain tiffs' subsequent costs and the plaintiffs should pay to the defendant one-fourth of the defendant s subse quent costs The Court offered to simplify its order by directing the defendant to pay all the costs of the plaintiffs up to the date of paying the R200 into Court and half the plaintiffs' taxed costs subsequent to that date The defendant appealed contending that under s. 379 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the plaintiffs should have been ordered to pay all the defendant s costs subsequent to the payment into Court. Held that the suit was not one to recover a debt or damages and therefore s 379 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply That being so the Judge had full discretion under s 220 of the Civil Procedure Code to apportion the costs and the Court of Appeal would not interfere with that discretion. Held also that in cases not being suits to recover a debt or damages where money is paid into Court the principle underlying s. 379 of the Civil Procedure Code ought to regulate the discretion of the Court in directing the payment of costs. Administration suit—Next friend—Unnecessary suit—Liability of next friend for costs—Adoption of suit by plaintiff—Costs of solicitor of next friend where suit unnecessary—Solicitor's lien on estate recovered or preserved by suit—Preservation of estate from future risk—Appointment of receiver—Insane executrix—Act II of 1874 s 35—The plaintiff who was a minor sued by her next friend (her husband) for the administration of her father Purshotam Ramji. The defendants in the suit were the plaintiff's mother Nanbai who was the widow and executrix of Purshotam Ramji and one Burjorji who had been appointed by Nanbai to act for her during her absence on pilgrimage. The plaintiff alleged that Nanbai was insane and unfit to manage the estate and that Burjorji was mismanaging and wasting it. A receiver was appointed shortly after the filing of the suit. At the hearing the suit was dismissed as against Burjorji and the Court ordered that his costs should be paid by the plaintiff's next friend, being of opinion that he was the real actor in the suit and that it would be unfair to make the plaintiff's estate bear the costs of proceedings in which she had no real voice. The Court was further of opinion that at the time the suit was filed Nanbai was not of unsound mind but that she had subsequently become insane. The usual accounts were ordered to be taken as against Nanbai. The result of taking these accounts was that her administration of the estate as executrix was found to be unimpeachable and in December 1883 the Court made an order directing that the next friend should pay the costs of the infant plaintiff. The next friend became insolvent and his solicitors (the respondents) obtained an order from the Judge in chambers that the receiver should pay their costs out of the estate in his hands. The plaintiff appealed. The respondents contended that the plaintiff had adopted the suit and that they had a lien for their costs—at any rate so far as they were incurred for the recovery and preservation of the estate. Held that the respondents were not entitled to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff had done no overt act signifying her adoption of the suit and the fact that she remained passive was consistent with her disapproval of it as the decree did not immediately affect her or require her to take action until the death of her mother Nanbai. Held also, that the property in the hands of the receiver could not be held to have been recovered by means of the suit as it appeared that the investments were of a perfectly legitimate nature; that there was no cause for alarm with respect to the safety of the property and that the suit so far as it was based on alleged danger to the estate was quite uncalled for. It was argued for the respondents that the appointment of a receiver preserved the estate from future risk arising from the fact that the executrix Nanbai was of unsound mind. Held that the mere fact that the appointment of a receiver

10 ———————— Disqualification to contract—Beng Reg LII of 1803—On a consideration of the provisions of Regulation LII of 1803 (the provisions of Regulation X of 1793 are similar) it was held that the mere fact that the Court of Wards has charge of the estates of a female did not necessarily disqualify her from contracting debts. That Regulation must be construed strictly the provisions requiring the Collector to report to the Board a female as disqualified and the subsequent procedure thereon should be strictly carried out as not mere matters of form but necessary preliminaries before the female can be considered disqualified. From the absence of the observance of those provisions in the case of R A and the conduct of the Government officials representing the Court of Wards the custody of the Court of Wards of her estates was held to be of such a character as did not render her a disqualified female incapable of contracting debts. 10 ———— Disqualification to contract—Beng Reg LII of 1803—On a consideration of the provisions of Regulation LII of 1803 (the provisions of Regulation X of 1793 are similar) it was held that the mere fact that the Court of Wards has charge of the estates of a female did not necessarily disqualify her from contracting debts That Regulation must be construed strictly the provisions requiring the Collector to report to the Board a female as disqualified and the subsequent procedure thereon should be strictly carried out as not mere matters of form but necessary preliminaries before the female can be considered disqualified. From the absence of the observance of those provisions in the case of R A and the conduct of the Government officials representing the Court of Wards the custody of the Court of Wards of her estates was held to be of such a character as did not render her a disqualified female incapable of contracting debts. The case having been framed incorrectly it was under the circumstances remanded for trial by the High Court under special directions. MAHOMED ZAHOOR ALI KHAN v RUTTA KOOER

11. ———— Beng Reg LII of 1803—Incompetency of disqualified proprietor to contract—Under s 7 of Regulation LII of 1803 lakhiraj lands belonging to a disqualified proprietor may be committed by the Government (on its appearing that this will be for its interests and those of such proprietor) to the charge of the Court of Wards and thereupon the whole estate and effects real and personal of such proprietor become vested in that Court. An estate consisting of lakhiraj lands was duly placed under the management of the Court of Wards the proprietress a Mahomedan being disqualified under the Regulation This ward having then become a party to a mortgage of such lands to secure repayment of money advanced to her it was held that she neither bound herself nor charged the estate This case distinguished from Mohummud Zahoor Ali Khan v Rutta Koer 11 Moore's I A 478 where the proprietress no intention to treat her as disqualified having been shown was adjudged capable of contracting though the Court of Wards was in possession of her estate On the facts of this case it was held that although the Court had given to this authority under certain limitations of which had notice to borrow money for a special here had not been such a holding out to the as would have induced any reasonable person to suppose that she had power to make the contract on which this suit was brought BALKRISHNA MASUMA BIBI

Accordingly in a suit for setting aside a summary attachment under Bombay Act I of 186 placed by the Collector on land held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years the value was held to be five times the assessment and the stamp duty calculated upon it irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. 5 ——————— and s 12—Finality of taxing officer's decision as to Court fee—"Final" Meaning of—Duty of Court Fees Act officer—The word final in s 5 of the Court Fees Act has the same meaning as in s 12 though it is applied to a different subject. The cases in which it has been held that notwithstanding the use of this word in s 12 an appeal lies from a decision as to the category in which the relief sought by a plaintiff or appellant falls do not mean that decisions which the section declares to be final are nevertheless appealable but that the question of category is not a question relating to valuation and therefore is not declared by the section to be final. In both s 5 and s. 12 final is used in its ordinary legal sense of unappealable. A decision under s 5 of the Act is not open to appeal, revision or review and is final for all purposes and no means have been provided or suggested by the Legislature for questioning it. The officer mentioned in s 5 of the Court Fees Act is not bound to advise parties as to the stamp required under the Act or to give them notice that they have not sufficiently stamped documents which the Act requires to be stamped before presentation. On the 2nd May 1883 the appellant paid the additional Court-fees under protest and a decree was then prepared bearing date the 1st March 1883 but it referred to and carried into effect the subsequent order of the 21st March and the 2nd May Per MAHMOOD J that as soon as the Judge had passed the decree of the 1st March 1883 he ceased to have any power over it and was not competent to introduce new matters not dealt with by the judgment; that the order of the 21st March and the deposit of the 2nd May whether right or wrong were not proceedings to which effect could be given in the antecedent decree of the 1st March 1883; and that the decree was ultra vires to that extent and was therefore liable to correction in second appeal under s 584 of the Civil Procedure Code The powers conferred by ss 54 (a) and (c) and 55 read with s 582 of the Civil Procedure Code or by s 12 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) read with cl. (ii) of s 10 are intended to be exercised before the disposal of the case and not after it has been decided finally so far as the Court is concerned. The powers conferred by s. 28 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court fees relates and even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree Per OLDFIELD J—That the Court had power to make the order it did inasmuch as the collection of Court fees was no part of a Judge's functions in the trial of a suit which could be said to have ceased with its determination; and the provisions of the Court Fees Act fixed no time within which the presiding Judge could exercise his power of ordering documents to be stamped and seemed on the other hand to contemplate the exercise of that power at any time subsequent to the receipt filing or use of a document and to make the validity of the document and the proceedings relative thereto dependent on the document being properly stamped MAHADEI v. RAM KISHEN DAS I. ———— Civil Procedure Code 1882 ss 54 56—Dismissal of suit—Rejection of plaint—Court Fees Act ss 9 10 11—When a memorandum of appeal which when tendered was insufficiently stamped has subsequently been sufficiently stamped the affixing of the full stamps cannot have a retrospective effect so as to validate the original presentation unless it has been done by order made under the second paragraph of s. 28 of the Court Fees Act In the case of a High Court, such an order can be made only by a Judge and by him only in cases of mistake or inadvertence. These words mean mistake or inadvertence on the part of the Court or its officers and not on the part of the appellant or his advisers The expression head of the office in s. 28 does not refer to the head of the office of a Court or at all events to the head of the office of a High Court acting not as such but as a taxing officer; but it refers to the head of a public office such as the Board of Revenue. Ss. 9 10 and 11 of the Court Fees Act are not in conflict with s. 28 nor are ss 9 10 11 and 28 read together in conflict with s 54 of the Civil Procedure Code Cases within s. 10 or s 11 of the Act would arise only where through mistake or inadvertence of the

4. ——— Suits brought to set aside or restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 246—Summary decision—Limitation Act 1871 art 15 (1877 art 13)—Interpretation of Acts—Valuation of suits —Suits brought to set aside or to restore an attachment upon a house in pursuance of the permission given in s 246 of the Civil Procedure Code may be regarded either as suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed so as to fall within s. 1 cl 4 art. (c) of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), or as suits to obtain or set aside a summary decision or order in which case the stamp duty payable would be that prescribed by art 17 cl. 1 sch. II of the Court Fees Act The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment it is the duty of the Courts to treat such suits as belonging to the latter class (it being the more favourable for the suitor) and to impose fees accordingly Decisions under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 as to the removal or retention of attachments are summary decisions or orders within the meaning of art 17 cl 1 sch II of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) The words summary decision or order in this clause of the Court Fees Act mean decision or order not made in a regular suit or appeal The construction which has been given to these words or nearly similar words in the Limitation Acts (e.g Act IX of 1871 sch II art 15 and Act XV of 1877 sch. II art 13) affords no guide to their construction in the Court Fees Act. When Acts are in pari materia they may be read together; treated as forming a Code and may be read together; but when this is not so the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another The valuation of suits for the purpose of jurisdiction is perfectly distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of Court-fees. Therefore Court Fees Acts which are fiscal enactments are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction. Motichand Jaichand v Dadabhai Pestonjee, 11 Bom 156 explained. Parlaji Tamoji v Dholapa Raghu I L R 4 Bom 123 dissented from by WESTROPP C.J DAYACHAND NEMCHAND v HEMCHAND DHU RAMCHAND I. 13 ———— Partner—Master and servant—The accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of the value of goods which had been entrusted to him to sell It was urged before the High Court that the conviction could not be sustained, as the accused was a partner with the prosecutor Held by JACKSON J that the finding of the Magistrate and Sessions Judge on the evidence was to the effect that the prisoner was not a partner but a servant that such finding could not be interfered with by the High Court as a Court of revision unless there was a [illegible] in law; that the finding was correct in law that the defence of the prisoner could not be taken to [illegible] to say that he was a partner but merely that he claimed a small share in the profits and that such claim did not make him a partner an agent's remuneration being a share in the profits not constituting the agent a partner Held by KEMP and MITTER JJ (releasing the prisoner) that though the allowance of a portion of the profits or goods does not destroy the relation of master and servant the accused in this case distinctly pleaded he was a partner and not only that he was entitled to a share in the profits that the lower Courts did not specifically decide that the accused was a servant and that the prosecutor's remedy was a civil suit for an account IN THE MATTER OF LALL CHAND ROY [9 W R, Cr, 37

14 ———— Public servant—Penal Code s 409—A village shroff whose duty it was to assist in collecting the public revenue received grain from raiyats and gave receipts as if for money received by virtue of a private arrangement. Held that he could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust by a public servant under s 409 of the Penal Code as he was not authorized to receive the public revenue in kind, and the party who delivered the grain did not thereby discharge himself from liability for the revenue ANONYMOUS 4 Mad., Ap, 32

15 ———— Penal Code ss 408 409—Sentence Mitigation of—Where a Court inspector improperly delegated to a constable the custody etc. of Government moneys (taking from him private security to save himself from loss in case of defalcation) and the constable dishonestly converted the money to his own use although he afterwards restored it the case was held to fall under s 408 and not s 409 of the Penal Code, and the sentence reduced from ten years' transportation and a fine of R500 to one year's rigorous imprisonment without fine QUEEN v BANEE MADHUB GHOSE [8 W R, Cr., 1

16 ———— Penal Code s 409—To constitute an offence under s. 409 it is not necessary that the property should be that of Government but that it should have been entrusted to a public servant in that capacity IN THE MATTER OF RAM SOONDER PODDAR 2 C L R., 515

19 ———— Master and servant—Servant entrusted with moneys for payment to tradesman of account settled with master for a specific sum—Gratuity of tradesman to servant—Right of master to benefit of gratuity—Act XLV of 1860 ss 405 409—When a master entrusts his servant with money for the payment of an open account i e an account of which the items have never been checked or settled and the tradesman makes the servant a present and the transaction amounts to a taxation of the bill and a reduction of the price by the servant the latter obtains the reduction for his master's benefit the money in his hands always remains the master's property and if he appropriates it he commits criminal breach of trust. But where the master himself has settled the account with the tradesman for a specific sum and sends the servant with money and the servant after making the payment accepts a present from the tradesman in that case the servant does not commit criminal breach of trust inasmuch as the money is given to him by a person whom he believes to have a right to give it though it may be that according to the strict equitable doctrines of the Court of Chancery he is bound to account to the master for the money Hay's case In re Canadian Oil Works Corporation L R 10 Ch App 593 referred to QUEEN EMPRESS v IMDAD KHAN I L R 8 All 120

20 ———— Penal Code s 408—Criminal breach of trust by a servant—Criminal misappropriation—An accused person who was in the service of zamindars and whose duty it was to pay into the Collectorate Government revenue due in respect of their estates immediately before the due date of a list received from them a certain sum of money with no specific instruction as to its application On receipt of that money he paid a portion only of it into the Collectorate on account of the revenue and having done so he then altered the challan given back to him showing the amount actually paid and made it appear that a much larger amount had been paid in than was the fact This challan he sent to his employer for the purpose of showing the application of the money He was charged (amongst other offences) with criminal breach of trust as a servant (s 408 of the Penal Code) in respect of the difference between the amount actually paid into the treasury and the amount shown to have been paid in by the altered challan The accused was convicted on all the charges It was contended that the charge under s 408 was not sustainable inasmuch as the money was not alleged to have been sent to the accused for the specific purpose of paying the Government revenue and that the accounts between him and his employers had not been adjusted and that it was not shown whether at the date of the alleged breach of trust the accused was indebted to his employer or the reverse Held that as the money was sent to the accused immediately before the last day and the challan was sent to the employers showing in its altered state the amount really payable as revenue which nearly covered the whole amount remitted it was reasonable to infer that the accused was aware of the implied purpose for which the money was remitted and as he deposited a very much smaller amount than that remitted and tried to pass off the altered challan as genuine there was a dishonest misappropriation of the difference sufficient to constitute the offence under s 408 LOLIT MOHAN SARKAR v QUEEN EMPRESS [I L R 22 Calc 313

——— (1872, s. 466)—Acts done by public servant—Sanction to prosecution—Mahalkari.—S. 466 of the Code of Criminal Procedure extends to all acts ostensibly done by a public servant, i.e., to acts which would have no special signification except as acts done by a public servant; therefore, a mahalkari charged with fabricating the proceedings of a case decided before himself could not be tried on that charge except with the sanction specified in that section. Para. 1 of s. 466, which mentions a sanction by Government or its deputy, is intended to apply at least chiefly to the cases of persons specially responsible to Government, such as accountants who have failed in their duty; and para. 2, which speaks of sanction by Government alone, to persons professing to exercise certain authority, and with that pretext doing an act which is impeached by a subject, on the ground of its being wholly unwarranted, or of an excess or impropriety of some kind. A mahalkari falls within the class of public servants contemplated in para. 1

1 ——— Deposition taken before Magistrate—Evidence before Sessions Judge—Discretion of Sessions Judge —The purp se of s 249 of the Code of Criminal Procedure as amended by s 20 of Act XI of 1874 is to make depositions given before Magistrates in the preliminary inquiry evidence in the trial before the Court of Sessi n only when the Sessions Judge determines in the exercise of his discretion that they are to be used in this way But the exercise of this discretion considering it as a matter of fact or law, is open to review by the Appellate Court REG v ARJUN MEGHA

2 ——— Former deposition of witness—Evidence Act s 80 —The confession of a witness in the shape of a former deposition can be used as evidence against a prisoner only on the condition prescribed by s 249 Criminal Procedure Code 1872 —that is it must have been duly taken by the committing officer in the presence of the person against whom it is to be used. The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession in order to afford primâ facie evidence under s. 80 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s. 249 QUEEN v NUSSURUDDIN

4 ——— Witnesses before committing Magistrate —On the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife and child the witnesses for the prosecution gave evidence contradicting the evidence given by them before the committing Magistrate and the Sessions Judge purporting to act under s 249 Act X of 1872 discarded the evidence taken before himself and grounded his judgment on the evidence given before the Magistrate and on this evidence convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to death. On appeal by the prisoner —Held that s 249 did not warrant such a course of proceeding That section merely authorizes the Court to take a particular statement made by a witness before the Magistrate as the true statement notwithstanding that it is denied or a statement inconsistent with it was made by the witness before the Judge only if the Judge should see that the original statement was worthy of belief and doesn't mean that the Court should discard wholly th t stimony of witnesses before it and have recourse to the testimony of the same persons given before another officer QUEEN v AMANULLA

6 ——— Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate —Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s 288 Code of Criminal Procedure in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate Where at a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge admitted, under s 288 Code of Criminal Procedure such evidence without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness that her statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police —Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made some inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s 288 Criminal Procedure Code Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and had shown no disposition in any way to resile from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate

8 ——————— Admissibility of evidence —Statement of approver made before committing Magistrate and afterwards retracted in the Court of Session —Pardon was tendered by a Magistrate to one of several persons who were being tried before him for dacoity The pardon was accepted, and the person to whom it was tendered made a statement as a witness before the Magistrate The case having been committed to the Court of Session the approver in that Court totally repudiated his statement made before the Magistrate Held that this repudiation did not prevent the Sessions Court from considering the evidence of the approver under the provisions of s 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure QUEEN EMPRESS v SONEJU

9 ——————— Deposit ons in former case —Refusal to allow cross examination of witnesses —A B and C having been charged with murder before a Magistrate two vakils presented their vakalutnamahs and applied to be allowed to conduct the defence of the accused The Magistrate refused permission and after recording the depositions of the witnesses committed the accused to take their trial before the Sessions Court In the Court of the Magistrate the only material evidence for the prosecution was that of three witnesses who on being examined in the Sessions Court denied all knowledge of the facts to which they had deposed before the Magistrate Two of them denied having made the statements recorded, while the third admitted the statements attributed to him but asserted they were false and made under pressure The Sessions Judge disbelieving the statements made in his Court thereupon under s. 219 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1872 (as amended by s 20 of the Amending Act) used the previous depositions as evidence in the case and mainly upon these convicted the accused of murder and sentenced them to transportation for life Against this conviction and sentence the prisoners appealed to the High Court on the ground that the previous depositions ought not to have been used as evidence in the case as the Magistrate had refused to allow their pleaders to appear and cross-examine the witnesses who made the depositions. The High Court affirmed the convictions and sentence IN THE MATTER OF DHAM MUNDUL

It appeared that G whose understanding was of the most limited character was caught at night in a house with some anklets in his possession He was a lad of 15 or 16 years of age and had been deaf and dumb from his birth. The High Court in this case having come to the conclusion that no benefit would be likely to result to the accused by his being tried by the Court of Sessions found that the accused was guilty of the alleged murder but that he was by reason of unsoundness of mind not responsible for his action and directed him to be kept in the district jail to await the orders of Government. (Act X of 1882) s 437—Notice to an accused person is not necessary in point of law before an order under s. 437 can be passed but as a matter of discretion it is proper that such notice should be given. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PRINSEP WILSON TOTTENHAM NORRIS PIGOT and O'KINEALY JJ)—After an inquiry by a subordinate Magistrate and the discharge of an accused person a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has jurisdiction under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry or a re-hearing upon the same materials which were before the subordinate Magistrate as when no further evidence is forthcoming But (PRINSEP J dissenting) the words "further inquiry" in that section mean the inquiry preliminary to trial which regularly results in a charge or discharge and do not include the trial And if on the evidence taken the accused ought to be committed then in a case triable only at the Sessions the proper course is to commit under s. 437; in other cases to refer to the High Court Per PRINSEP J—The word "inquiry" includes a trial and the "further inquiry" would therefore allow of the framing of a charge and the cross examination of witnesses for the prosecution Per PETHERAM C.J and GHOSE J—The power given by s 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry is confined to cases in which the revising officer is satisfied for one of the reasons mentioned in s 435 that the subordinate officer has proceeded on insufficient materials and that with a more exhaustive inquiry further material would be forthcoming It was not intended that such an enquiry should be granted simply for the reconsideration of evidence IN THE MATTER OF HARI DASS SANYAL v SARITULLA I. The Judge disbelieved their statements, and considering that the plaintiff had failed to prove his case gave judgment for the defendant without requiring him to give evidence on that issue In the concluding paragraph of his judgment the Judge directed the depositions of the two witnesses above referred to, together with the [illegible] memoranda of their evidence to be sent to the Magistrate with a view to his enquiring whether or not they had voluntarily given false evidence in a judicial proceeding, and he further directed the Magistrate to enquire whether or not the plaintiff had abetted the offence of giving false evidence on the ground that as the witnesses were the plaintiff's servants he must personally have influenced them and also to enquire whether the plaint which the plaintiff had attested contained averments which he knew to be false On a motion to quash this order —Held that under s. 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Judge had no power to send a case to a Magistrate except when after having made such preliminary enquiry as may be necessary he is of opinion that there is sufficient ground (i e ground of a nature higher than mere surmise or suspicion) for directing judicial enquiry into the matter of a specific charge and that the Judge is bound to indicate the particular statements or averments in respect of which he considers that there is ground for a charge into which the Magistrate ought to enquire and that the order was bad because the Judge had made no preliminary enquiry and because it was too vague and general in its character QUEEN v BAIJOO LALL. ——— s. 551—Unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose—Infant Custody of—A Hindu girl under the age of 14 years went of her own accord to a Mission house where she was received and allowed to remain. The mother and husband of the girl thereupon applied to the Magistrate who took proceedings under s. 551 of the Criminal Procedure Code The lady superintendent of the Mission house denied that the girl was legally married and alleged that she was practically being brought up with the connivance of the mother to a life of prostitution The Magistrate after recording evidence found that the girl was legally married that the other allegation was not established; and that although she went to and remained in the Mission house of her own free will there was under the circumstances an unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose He further found that there were no facts established which would disentitle the husband or the mother to the custody of the girl and passed an order under the section directing the girl to be restored to her mother Held upon the facts as found by the Magistrate as it was immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent to remain at the Mission house there was an unlawful detention within the meaning of these words as used in the section as the girl was kept against the will of those who were lawfully entitled to have charge of her Held also that s 551 applying only as it does to women and female children must not be construed so as to make it include purposes which, although not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian but that the purpose whether entertained towards a woman or a female child must be in itself unlawful Held consequently that in the circumstances of the case there was no detention for an unlawful purpose and that the Magistrate had no power to make the order Held further that although the Magistrate had no power under the section to make the order he did it did not follow that the Court should direct the girl to be restored to the custody of the lady superintendent even if it had the power to do so and that having regard to the circumstances of the case there was nothing to justify such an order being passed ABRAHAM v MAHTABO I. 2. ———— Irregularity—Waiver or consent by prisoner—Recording statements of witnesses —The jailor of a district jail being accused by one of the jail clerks of falsifying his accounts and defrauding the Government the matter was enquired into by the District Magistrate and the jailor was by the Magistrate's order placed on trial before a Bench of Magistrates consisting of the District Magistrate himself L the Officiating Superintendent of the jail and three other Honorary Magistrates The prisoner and his pleaders were alleged to have stated before the commencement of the trial on being questioned that they had no objection to the composition of the Bench but after the charges had been framed the prisoner's counsel objected to the Bench as formed. The District Magistrate directed the Government pleader to prosecute and both the District Magistrate and L gave evidence for the prosecution After the case for the prosecution was closed two formal charges were drawn up namely that the prisoner had debited Government with the price of more oil seed than he actually purchased and that he had received payment for certain oil at a higher rate than he credited to Government The moneys the receipt of which were the subject of the first charge were obtained by the prisoner on the strength of certain vouchers which he had induced L to sign as correct and L had sanctioned the sale at the rates credited to Government Upon the prisoner's giving the names of the witnesses he intended to call in his defence L was deputed by his brother Magistrates to examine some of them who were connected with the jail in order to guard against deviation and the depositions so taken were placed on the record to be used by either party though not themselves as evidence The prisoner was convicted On a motion to quash the conviction —Held that the recording the statements of the prisoner's witnesses was irregular Criminal proceedings are bad unless they are conducted in the manner prescribed by law and if they are substantially bad the defect will not be cured by any waiver or consent of the prisoner QUEEN v BHOLA NATH SEN

The Assistant Magistrate on the same day found that the conviction should have been under s. 48 of the Abkari Law and recorded a note to that effect. Held that as it was clear from the evidence recorded and from the answer of the accused that he was not misled as to the charge against him and consequently in no way prejudiced by the erroneous description of the offence contained in the conviction, the conviction should be altered so as to bring it under s. 48, Act XXI of 1856. These copies were read out to the witnesses, who were then cross-examined by the prisoners and no objection to this procedure was taken on the prisoners' behalf. The accused were convicted. Held that although the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was irregular the irregularity was cured by the provisions of s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code and of s. 167 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) as it was not shown that there had been any failure of justice or that the accused had been substantially prejudiced and as the matters elicited in cross-examination were sufficient to sustain the conviction. 44. ——————— Irregularity in omitting to call on accused for defence—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s. 289, s. 423 cl. (d) and s. 537—Misdirection to jury.—The formality of calling upon an accused person to enter on his defence under the provisions of s. 289 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not a mere formality but is an essential part of a criminal trial. Omission to do so occasions a failure of justice and is not cured by s. 537 of the Code. To allow the jury to pronounce their verdict before the accused is called upon to enter on his defence is a misdirection though the Judge omits to charge the jury at all. In such a case cl. The Sessions Judge on examining the record of the case was of opinion that as the offence committed by the accused was not cognizable by the trying Magistrate his proceedings were void ab initio under s 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code He therefore referred the case to the High Court and recommended that the convictions under s. 325 should be set aside. Held that the proceedings before the second class Magistrate were not void ab initio as he had jurisdiction to try the accused for offences punishable under ss 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code with which they were originally charged Held also that though it was the duty of the trying Magistrate when the evidence disclosed a circumstance of aggravation such as the use of a dangerous weapon which made the offence cognizable by a higher Court to adopt the proper procedure to send the case to the higher Court still it was not necessary to quash the proceedings as the accused were not in any way prejudiced and the sentences were not inadequate. of pre emption which was based on contract and custom as evidenced by the wajib ul urz of a village, was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that any contract which might be founded on the wajib ul urz was not binding on the vendor defendant as that document did not bear his signature and the lower Appellate Court attached no weight to the wajib ul urz as proof of the custom of pre-emption because it was drawn up when Regulation VII of 1822 was in force and at that time there was no legal presumption of its accuracy The claim was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff s evidence did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the village. Held that the lower Appellate Court had erred in dealing with the evidence and that although this particular wajib ul urz was made before Act XIX of 1873 came into force yet the weight which would attach to its entries both as proof of the contract as well of custom was very strong Isri Singh v Ganga I L R 2 All 876, referred to MUHAMMAD HASAN v MUNNA LAL I. 45. ———————— Customary right —Facts necessary to establish the existence of a customary right—Easement—Easement Act ss. 4 and 15.—The plaintiff sued for possession of a piece of land which, he alleged, formed part of the courtyard of his kothi and for demolition of a chabutra thereon. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title and alleged that they always used the chabutra as a sitting place and that during the Moharram the tazias and alums were exhibited upon the chabutra, and a takht was placed upon it. The Court of first instance found that the defendants had a right to use the land in the manner claimed during the Moharram. The lower Appellate Court, on the question of the defendant's right to use the said land in the manner claimed by them found as follows:—That various mirasis, whose connection with each other is not established, have within a period of twenty years or so placed tazias upon land and sung there. Held that this finding of fact did not necessarily in law lead to the conclusion that there was a local custom by virtue of which the easement now claimed by the defendants was acquired. Where a local custom excluding or limiting the general rule of law is set up a Court should not decide that it exists unless such Court is satisfied of its reasonableness, and its certainty as to extent and application and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by leave granted or by stealth or by force and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which it concerned KUAR SEN v MAMMAN I. the hands of the Collector as manager of the Court of Wards on the allegations that she had placed the property in the hands of the Court some years previously, because she was not at that time in a position to manage it herself but that she was now capable of managing it and desired to get it back. The suit was dismissed and the plaintiff appealed on the ground inter alia that inasmuch as she was not a disqualified proprietor within the meaning of Act XIX of 1873 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Act) the Court of Wards had no jurisdiction to take the property and that its possession was merely the result of an arrangement to which she was a consenting party and which she now desired to terminate. Held that with reference to the provisions of Act XIX of 1873 and Act VIII of 1879 (North West Provinces Land Revenue Acts) the suit as brought was not maintainable inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiff had obtained the previous sanction of the local Government to the release of the property from the superintendence of the Court of Wards as required by s 20 of the latter Act. Held also that the plaintiff could not be allowed in appeal entirely to change the nature of the grounds upon which she alleged herself to be entitled to claim relief and that hence she could not now raise the plea that the Court of Wards in taking the property under its management had acted without jurisdiction. 18 ——— Beng Act IV of 1870—Death of minor—Right of suit—Held with reference as well to s. 79 Bengal Act IV of 1870 as to the justice and equity of the case that the power of the Court of Wards to represent the estate or bring a suit on behalf of a minor does not cease with the death of the minor. SOOMUNGUL KOOER v COURT OF WARDS 17 W R 560

19 ——— Minor—Irregular procedure—On 27th July 1871 a disqualified proprietor B signed a duly attested document declaring he had adopted a boy by name D the next heir R signing a declaration of his approval of the adoption. Before sanction of the Lieutenant Governor could be obtained under Bengal Act IV of 1870 s 74 B died and the sanction was subsequently refused on the ground of B's death. On application made under Act XXVII of 1860 the Judge on 28th March 1872 found the adoption good and appointed one P to be guardian of the minor D and directed the estate to be placed under the management of the Court of Wards. M a judgment-creditor of B's failing to execute his decree against the estate of B brought a suit to have it declared that R as heir had inherited all B's property and that he M was entitled to have that property attached and sold in satisfaction of his decree. The only defendants were A H manager under the Court of Wards, and P. The Subordinate Judge gave plaintiff a decree declaring that D was not the legally adopted son of B. This was appealed from. Held that the Judge had no power to make any such order as that of the 28th March 1872 in regard to the Court of Wards. What he had power to do under Act XL of 1858 s 12 was to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate and it would then have become the duty of the Collector to appoint a manager and a guardian in the same manner etc as if the minor's property and person were subject to the Court of Wards. Held that the minor's interests were not properly represented before the Subordinate Judge whose decree therefore could not stand so as to affect the minor and that the minor must be made a party strictly in the manner prescribed by Bengal Act IV of 1870, s 69. 20 ——— s 75—Sale for arrears of rent—Power of Collector—Tenure created under Court of Wards—Previously existing tenure—The provisions of s. 75 of Bengal Act IV of 1870 apply only to tenures created by the Collector during the time the estate has been in the hands of the Court of Wards and not to tenures created previously. A Collector therefore has no power to sell for arrears of rent a tenure created before he took charge of the estate without previously obtaining a decree for such arrears in the regular way. COURT OF WARDS ACT (BENGAL ACT IX OF 1879)

——— s 20 and ss 51-55—Suit"—Application for execution by Collector on behalf of ward when manager of Ward's estate has been appointed—The word suit as used in ss 51 to 55 of Bengal Act IX of 1879 is not limited to what is usually called a regular suit but covers miscellaneous proceedings in a suit such as an application for execution of a decree in which the ward for the first time seeks to have the carriage of litigation instituted by his predecessor in title. When it appeared that a manager of a minor's property had been appointed by the Court of Wards under the provisions of s 20 of Bengal Act IX of 1879 and during the absence of such manager on leave an application was made on behalf of the minor by the Collector of the district for execution of a decree—Held that the office of the manager did not become vacant because the manager obtained leave and that if it were not vacant, s. 51 of the Act did not enable the Collector to appear on behalf of the minor. 2. ———— Bengal Act III of 1881 s. 7—Suit on behalf of ward by manager without sanction of the Court of Wards Effect of—Sanction after appeal Effect of—In the absence of some order by the Court of Wards authorizing the bringing of a suit, a suit instituted by a manager on behalf of a ward must be dismissed. A suit was instituted in the Court of the First Subordinate Judge of Dacca on behalf of a ward by his manager without the order or sanction of the Court of Wards and proceeded to judgment without any such order or sanction. The suit was partially decreed; and the manager appealed to the District Judge for that portion of the claim which had been dismissed by the Court of first instance. At the hearing of the appeal an application was filed on behalf of the appellant accompanied by a letter giving sanction to the institution of the suit, the appeal and other proceedings connected therewith, with retrospective effect from the date of its institution. The Judge dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held having regard to s. 55 of the Court of Wards Act, 1879 as amended by s. 7 of Bengal Act III of 1881 the lower Appellate Court was right in dismissing the suit. Held also that the sanction given after appeal did not have a retrospective effect. Accordingly in a suit for setting aside a summary attachment, under Bombay Act I of 1865 placed by the Collector on land held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years, the value was held to be five times the assessment and the stamp duty calculated upon it, irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. 5. ——— and s. 12—Finality of taxing officer's decision as to Court fee—"Final," Meaning of—Duty of Court Fees Act officer.—The word "final" in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act has the same meaning as in s. 12, though it is applied to a different subject. The cases in which it has been held that notwithstanding the use of this word in s. 12 an appeal lies from a decision as to the category in which the relief sought by a plaintiff or appellant falls, do not mean that decisions which the section declares to be final are nevertheless appealable, but that the question of category is not a question relating to valuation and therefore is not declared by the section to be final. In both s. 5 and s. 12 "final" is used in its ordinary legal sense of unappealable. A decision under s. 5 of the Act is not open to appeal, revision or review and is final for all purposes, and no means have been provided or suggested by the Legislature for questioning it. The officer mentioned in s. 5 of the Court Fees Act is not bound to advise parties as to the stamp required under the Act, or to give them notice that they have not sufficiently stamped documents which the Act requires to be stamped before presentation. The theory being that all land is primarily liable to be rated or taxed for the public revenue, any sum not levied according to the appraisement made in order to show the proper amount of the land tax may be regarded as a remission In the case of a talukhdari village the proprietor of which had under a settlement with Government for a period of twenty two years agreed to pay a fixed annual jumma or lump assessment instead of the full survey assessment for the whole village Held by a majority of the Full Bench that the difference in amount between the jumma and the full survey assessment was a remission and therefore a suit for possession of lands in this village was to be valued according to cl 3 of the proviso to art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) Per BIRDWOOD J—The remission contemplated by cl (3) of the proviso is an express remission and not a mere difference in amount between the actual assessment payable by a talukhdar and the survey assessment The three clauses of the proviso seem to apply only to lands which have been subjected to a survey settlement as ordinarily understood and legally provided for in the Bombay Presidency the first clause being applicable to lands settled for a period not exceeding thirty years the second to lands settled for a longer period or permanently and the third to inam lands on which the whole or a part of the survey assessment has been expressly remitted. The talukhdars are not inamdars They are land holders liable to pay a land tax but not under a survey settlement such as is applicable to lands for which provision seems to have been specially made in the proviso to art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act No part of the proviso therefore applies to a suit for the possession of lands in a talukhdari village Such a suit should be valued according to cl (d) of art 5 of s 7 of the Court Fees Act ALA CHELA v OGHAD BHAI THAKERSI I. 4. ——— Suits brought to set aside or restore attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 246—Summary decision—Limitation Act 1871 art 15 (1877, art 13)—Interpretation of Acts—Valuation of suits.—Suits brought to set aside or to restore an attachment upon a house in pursuance of the permission given in s 246 of the Civil Procedure Code may be regarded either as "suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed" so as to fall within s. 1 cl 4 art (c) of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) or as suits to obtain or set aside a summary decision or order in which case the stamp duty payable would be that prescribed by art 17 cl. 1 sch. II of the Court Fees Act The Court Fees Act being a fiscal enactment it is the duty of the Courts to treat such suits as belonging to the latter class (it being the more favourable for the suitor) and to impose fees accordingly Decisions under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 as to the removal or retention of attachments are summary decisions or orders within the meaning of art 17 cl 1 sch II of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) The words summary decision or order in this clause of the Court Fees Act mean decision or order not made in a regular suit or appeal The construction which has been given to these words or nearly similar words in the Limitation Acts (e.g Act IX of 1871 sch II art 15 and Act XV of 1877 sch II art 13) affords no guide to their construction in the Court Fees Act. When Acts are in pari materia they may be treated as forming a Code and may be read together; but when this is not so, the construction which has been put upon one cannot be relied upon as a guide to the construction of another The valuation of suits for the purpose of jurisdiction is perfectly distinct from their valuation for the fiscal purpose of Court-fees. Therefore Court Fees Acts which are fiscal enactments are not to be resorted to for construing enactments which fix the valuation of suits for the purpose of determining jurisdiction. Motichand Jaichand v Dadabhai Pestonjee 11 Bom., 186 explained. Parlaji Tamaji v Dholapa Raghu I L R., 4 Bom 123 dissented from by WESTROPP C.J DAYACHAND NEMCHAND v HEMCHAND DHURAMCHAND I. Fees Act 1870 s 7 cl 4 and s 17—A suit praying merely for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to require the defendants to account to him and to permit him to inspect their books is simply a suit for a declaratory decree without consequential relief and falls within art 17 cl 3 of sch II of Act VII of 1870 A suit praying for such a declaration as the above and also for a positive order in the nature of a mandatory injunction for the production of the defendants' books and property in their hands or a suit praying for such declaration as the above and also for a positive decree for an account to be taken by the Court and for the production of the books and property would range under s 7 cl 4 art (c) of Act VII of 1870 as being a suit to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed and also within art (d) of the same section as being a suit to obtain an injunction and a suit of the third species described above would fall under art (f) of the same clause as being a suit for accounts Quære—Whether in the case of a suit for a declaration of the right of the plaintiff to an account and to inspection of the defendants books and for a mandatory injunction for the production of those books or of a suit for such declaration and for a positive decree for the taking of an account by the Court and the production of the defendants books the plaint would by virtue of s 17 of Act VII of 1870 require separate stamps under arts (d) and (f) of cl 4 s 7 or be sufficiently covered by the stamp under art (c) of the same clause and whether assuming the declaration and the account each to require a stamp the prayer for an injunction or order for the production of books is not merely ancillary to and not a distinct subject from the taking of an account Quære—Whether the provision in s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 that the amount of the fee payable in suits falling within that clause shall be computed according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint is so inconsistent with that portion of s 31 of Act VIII of 1859 which permits the Court receiving the plaint to revise the valuation of the claim as to render that portion of s. 31 of Act VIII of 1859 inoperative in suits within s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 notwithstanding the concluding passage in the clause Quære—Whether the concluding passage in cl 4 s. 7 of Act VII of 1870 is too express to admit of a limitation of the power of the Judge and leaves him the right to revise the valuation placed on suits under cl 4 by the plaintiff But assuming this to be so it would generally not be advisable that the Judge should enhance the valuation on the reception of the plaint The fee payable under s 7 cl 4 of Act VII of 1870 is according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint and not the value of the subject matter of the plaint MANOHAR GANESH v BAWA RAM CHARAN DAS

The certificate of the Magistrate appended to such confession in order to afford prima facie evidence under s 80 of the Evidence Act of the circumstances mentioned in it relative to the taking of the statement ought to give the facts necessary to render the deposition admissible under s. 249 QUEEN v NESSURUDDIN

4 ——— Witnesses before committing Magistrate—On the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife and child the witnesses for the prosecution gave evidence contradicting the evidence given by them before the committing Magistrate; and the Sessions Judge purporting to act under s 249 Act X of 1872 discarded the evidence taken before himself and grounded his judgment on the evidence given before the Magistrate and on this evidence convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to death. On appeal by the prisoner,—Held that s. 249 did not warrant such a course of proceeding That section merely authorizes the Court to take a particular statement made by a witness before the Magistrate as the true statement notwithstanding that it is denied or a statement inconsistent with it was made by the witness before the Judge only if the Judge should see that the original statement was worthy of belief and does not mean that the Court should discard wholly the testimony of witnesses before it and have recourse to the testimony of the same persons given before another officer QUEEN v AMANULLA

6 ——— Duty of Sessions Judge as to evidence taken before the Magistrate—Sessions Judges should act with great caution in exercising the discretion given to them by s. 288 Code of Criminal Procedure in admitting evidence given by a witness before the committing Magistrate Where at a Sessions trial the Sessions Judge admitted, under s. 288 Code of Criminal Procedure such evidence without any inquiry as to the allegation made by the witness that her statement before the Magistrate was made under pressure and threat by the police—Held that the District Judge should not have placed reliance on the evidence as given before the Magistrate and that he would have shown a better discretion if he had first made some inquiry by examining the police officer as to the restraint and pressure under which the statement was alleged to have been made A witness was not examined in the Sessions Court with regard to the particular statements made by him before the committing Magistrate and he did not repeat those statements before the Sessions Court Held that the Sessions Judge could not properly admit such statements in evidence under s. 288 Criminal Procedure Code Where a witness was examined in the Sessions Court and had shown no disposition in any way to resile from any statement he had made before the committing Magistrate

The Magistrate refused permission and, after recording the depositions of the witnesses committed the accused to take their trial before the Sessions Court In the Court of the Magistrate the only material evidence for the prosecution was that of three witnesses, who on being examined in the Sessions Court denied all knowledge of the facts to which they had deposed before the Magistrate Two of them denied having made the statements recorded while the third admitted the statements attributed to him but asserted they were false and made under pressure The Sessions Judge disbelieving the statements made in his Court thereupon under s 219 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1872 (as amended by s 20 of the Amending Act) used the previous depositions as evidence in the case and mainly upon these convicted the accused of murder and sentenced them to transportation for life Against this conviction and sentence the prisoners appealed to the High Court on the ground that the previous depositions ought not to have been used as evidence in the case as the Magistrate had refused to allow their pleaders to appear and cross-examine the witnesses who made the depositions The High Court affirmed the convictions and sentence IN THE MATTER OF DHAM MUNDUL

The Subordinate Magistrate to whom the case was made over made an inquiry and committed the accused persons for trial before the Court of Session on charges under ss 363 and 420 of the Penal Code It was contended that the Court of Session was not competent to direct the accused persons to be committed under s. 296 of Act X of 1872 the case not being a Sessions case within the meaning of that section and that the commitment was consequently illegal Held that there was no direction to commit within the meaning of that section that is to say to send the accused persons at once to the Sessions Court without further inquiry and whether or not the inquiry was made in consequence of the suggestions of the Court of Session was immaterial and that the inquiry upon the charges under ss. 363 and 420 of the Penal Code was rightly held by the Subordinate Magistrate and the commitment could not be impeached. CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODES (ACT V OF 1898 ACT X OF 1882 ACT X OF 1872 ACTS XXV OF 1861 AND VIII OF 1869)—continued

(Act X of 1882) s 437—No n tice to an accused person is necessary in p int of law before an order under s. 437 can be passed but as a matter of discretion it is proper that such n tice should be given. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (PRINSEP WILSON TOTTENHAM NORRIS PIGOT and O KINEALY JJ)—After an inquiry by a subordinate Magistrate and the discharge of an accused person a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has jurisdiction under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry or a re-hearing upon the same materials which were bef re the subordinate Magistrate i.e wh n no further evidence is forthcoming But (PRINSEP J dissenting) the words further inquiry in that section mean the inquiry preliminary to trial which regularly results in a charge or discharge and do not include the trial And if on the evidence taken the accused ought to be committed then in a case triable only at the Sessions the proper c urse is to c mmit under s. 476 in other cases to refer to the High Court Per PRINSEP J—The word inquiry includes a trial and the further inquiry would therefore allow of the framing of a charge and the cross examination of witnesses for the prosecution Per PETHERAM C.J and GHOSE J—The power given by s 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code to order a further inquiry is confined to cases in which the revising officer is satisfied for one of the reasons mentioned in s 435 that the subordinate officer has proceeded on insufficient materials and that with a more exhaustive inquiry further material would be forthcoming It was not intended that such an enquiry should be granted simply for the reconsideration of evidence IN THE MATTER OF HARI DASS SANYAL v SARITULLA I L R 15 Calc 608

25 ——— Further inquiry—Notice to the accused—Practice—Before making an order for further inquiry under s 437 Criminal Procedure Code a n tice should be given to the accused person to give him an opportunity of being heard upon the question whether any further inquiry sh uld be made Hari Das Sanyal v Saritulla I L R 15 Calc 608 followed. JAIJAT RAM v SUPHAL SINGH 2 C W N 198

26 ——— Discretion of Court—Further inquiry—Notice—Although there is nothing in s 437 rendering it incumbent to give notice before directing a further inquiry yet a Court would not be exercising a proper discretion if before ordering a further inquiry it did not give notice to the accused to show cause against such ord r Where theref re a further inquiry was directed with ut such previous n tice to the accused the High Court set aside the order Hari Dass Sanyal v Saritulla I L R 15 Calc 608 followed. IN THE MATTER OF AMIR I ARIADAR 3 C W N 249
KATTI SINGH v KARI SINGH 4 C W N 100

27 ——— Further inquiry—Wrongful confinement—Wrongful restraint—Malice—Penal Code ss 340 34—The accused as abkari inspector visited a toddy sh p where the complainant and one D were employed as agents for the sale of toddy Having reas n to suspect that an offence under the Abkari Act (Bombay Act V of 1878) had been committed the accused made an inquiry in the course of which the complainant made certain statements implicating his fellow servant The accused thereupon resolved to prosecute D and make the complainant a witness in the case In order to prevent him being tutored the accused ordered his sepoy to bring the complainant to his camp and there detained him during the night and on the following morning sent him in charge of a sepoy to a Magistrate s Court where the complainant repeated the statements made by him before the accused He was then allowed to go away The accused prosecuted D and in the course of his trial admitted in his deposition that he had ordered his sepoy to bring the complainant to his camp and had detained him there during the night After the termination of D's trial the complainant charged the accused with wrongful confinement under s. 342 of the Penal Code The accused pleaded that the complainant had voluntarily come to his tent to have his statements reduced to writing and that he had of his own accord stopped in his camp during the night The trying Magistrate held this plea proved and discharged the accused under s 253 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) The Sessions Judge held that though the accused had detained the complainant in his camp during the night still he was n t guilty of any offence under the Penal Code as he had acted with ut malice and to the best of his judgment He therefore declined to interfere or order an further inquiry Held by the High Court on revision that the trying Magistrate had wr ngly omitted to take into considerati n the admissions made by the accused in his deposition in D's case Those admissions had an important bearing on the present case They were admissible in evidence against the accused and as they were left out of consid ration the inquiry was necessarily incomplete and imperfect Further inquiry was therefore ordered DHANJA v CLIFFORD

28 ——— Order of Sessions Judge rejecting application under s 437—Subsequent order of District Magistrate granting similar application—Practice—Where a Sessions Judge has passed orders under s. 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code a District Magistrate acting under the same section sh uld not pass orders of a contrary kind but if he thinks that the Judge s orders were wrong he should submit them to the High Court through the medium of the Public Prosecutor Queen Empress v Shere Singh I L R 9 All 362 referred to Where a Sessions Judge had, under s 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code refused to order further inquiry into the case of an accused person who had been discharged the High Court set aside a subsequent order of the Magistrate of the 9 ———— Institution of criminal prosecution pending appeal in Civil Court—If in the course of a proceeding either civil or criminal a Judge or Magistrate finds clear ground for believing that either the parties to the proceeding or their witnesses have committed perjury or any other offence against public justice he is justified in directing criminal proceedings against such person under s 471 of the Criminal Procedure Code without any further enquiry than that which he has already held in his own Court As a matter of discretion and propriety it is right for a Court before committing a person on a charge of perjury upon his own uncontradicted statement to await the hearing of the appeal where an appeal is pending in the case in which he is charged with such perjury IN THE MATTER OF MUTTY LALL GHOSE I. The mother and husband of the girl thereupon applied to the Magistrate who took proceedings under s. [illegible] of the Criminal Procedure Code The lady superintendent of the Mission house denied that the girl was legally married and alleged that she was practically being brought up with the connivance of the mother to a life of prostitution The Magistrate after recording evidence found that the girl was legally married; that the other allegation was not established; and that although she went to and remained in the Mission house of her own free will there was under the circumstances an unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose He further found that there were no facts established which would disentitle the husband or the mother to the custody of the girl and passed an order under the section directing the girl to be restored to her mother Held upon the facts as found by the Magistrate as it was immaterial whether the girl did or did not consent to remain at the Mission house there was an unlawful detention within the meaning of these words as used in the section as the girl was kept against the will of those who were lawfully entitled to have charge of her Held also that s. 551 applying only as it does to women and female children must not be construed so as to make it include purposes which, although not unlawful in themselves might only become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian but that the purpose whether entertained towards a woman or a female child must be in itself unlawful Held consequently that in the circumstances of the case there was no detention for an unlawful purpose and that the Magistrate had no power to make the order Held further that although the Magistrate had no power under the section to make the order he did it did not follow that the Court should direct the girl to be restored to the custody of the lady superintendent even if it had the power to do so and that having regard to the circumstances of the case there was nothing to justify such an order being passed ABRAHAM v. MAHTABO I. 62 ———— Criminal Procedure Code 1882 s 530 cl (p)—Offence originally cognizable by a second class Magistrate subsequently non cognizable by reason of an aggravating circumstance—Duty of inferior Court —The accused were charged before a Magistrate of the second class with causing grievous hurt as members of an unlawful assembly under ss 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code The evidence showed that one of the accused had used an axe in causing the hurt The Magistrate apparently ignored this fact and he convicted the accused under s 325 of the Code The accused appealed. The District Magistrate who heard one appeal and the first class Magistrate who heard the rest of the appeals were both of opinion that the offence committed by the accused was one of causing grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon within the meaning of s 326 of the Penal Code and as such beyond the jurisdiction of the second class Magistrate. But they did not think it proper under the circumstances of the case to quash the convictions. The Sessions Judge on examining the record of the case was of opinion that as the offence committed by the accused was not cognizable by the trying Magistrate his proceedings were void ab initio under s 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code He therefore referred the case to the High Court and recommended that the convictions under s 325 should be set aside. Held that the proceedings before the second class Magistrate were not void ab initio as he had jurisdiction to try the accused for offences punishable under ss. 149 and 325 of the Indian Penal Code with which they were originally charged Held also that though it was the duty of the trying Magistrate when the evidence disclosed a circumstance of aggravation such as the use of a dangerous weapon which made the offence cognizable by a higher Court to adopt the proper procedure to send the case to the higher Court still it was not necessary to quash the proceedings as the accused were not in any way prejudiced and the sentences were not inadequate. of pre-emption which was based on contract and custom as evidenced by the wajib ul urz of a village was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that any contract which might be founded on the wajib ul urz was not binding on the vendor-defendant as that document did not bear his signature, and the lower Appellate Court attached no weight to the wajib ul urz as proof of the custom of pre-emption because it was drawn up when Regulation VII of 1822 was in force, and at that time there was no legal presumption of its accuracy The claim was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff s evidence did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the village. Held that the lower Appellate Court had erred in dealing with the evidence, and that although this particular wajib-ul urz was made before Act XIX of 1873 came into force yet the weight which would attach to its entries both as proof of the contract as well of custom was very strong Ieri Singh v Ganga I L R 2 All 876 referred to MUHAMMAD HASAN v MUNNA LAL I. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title and alleged that they always used the chabutra as a sitting place and that during the Moharram the tazias and alams were exhibited upon the chabutra, and a takht was placed upon it. The Court of first instance found that the defendants had a right to use the land in the manner claimed during the Moharram. The lower Appellate Court on the question of the defendant's right to use the said land in the manner claimed by them, found as follows:—That various mirasis, whose connection with each other is not established, have within a period of twenty years or so placed tazias upon land and sung there.' Held that this finding of fact did not necessarily in law lead to the conclusion that there was a local custom by virtue of which the easement now claimed by the defendants was acquired. Where a local custom excluding or limiting the general rule of law is set up a Court should not decide that it exists unless such Court is satisfied of its reasonableness, and its certainty as to extent and application and is further satisfied by the evidence that the enjoyment of the right was not by leave granted, or by stealth, or by force and that it had been openly enjoyed for such a length of time as suggests that originally by agreement or otherwise the usage had become a customary law of the place in respect of the persons and things which it concerned KUAR SEN v MAMMAN I.
